Check to the Braggers.

A gentleman of this City authorizes us to announce that he will bet ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS on GRANT and WILSON, on every State in the Union. Not less than $10,000 to be deposited by each party, in any approved Trust Company, to abide the result.

Doolittle's Case.

The Tribune says it does not defend Mr. Doolittle. Senator Fenton must look after his Professor of Journalism and give him a few more lessons, now that one thing has been found too dusty for him to defend in the interest of "Old Honesty." The Professor says that "Mr. Doolittle is not a candidate for any office so far as we know, and his character is not a matter at present at issue." Less than a year ago the Tribune said Mr. Doolittle had become a professional office-seeker. But let that pass. The sycophant's doctrine is that a man who stands convicted by his own letters of corruption and falsehood, of forcing a present from a subordinate and of lying about it, may go about the country in the interest of Mr. Greeley demanding present thinking and corruption, and yet "his character is not a matter at present at issue." This will be encouraging to Kilpatrick and Lindsay and Stevens and the whole tribe of tainted orators. Indeed it will serve Tweed admirably when he returns out of his 10 sentences in favor of Greeley. "True, I'm a thief, a rascal, I'm all that is bad, but my character is not a matter at present at issue, and my friend Greeley is honest."

The Bloody Chasm.

Col. M. A. Bryson, of St. Louis, made, in that city, on Thursday night last, a candid reply to Senator Schurz's speech of July 22. In alluding to the cry that the North must be "respiritualized" to the South, he said: "But Senator Schurz says we won't shake hands across the bloody chasm. Well, we have been offering to shake hands with the South since the extinction of the South has been maltreated in the North! What Southern man has been treated otherwise than as a gentleman in the North? I remember, in 1867, being on the floor of the Merchants' Exchange in Cincinnati. I met Kirby Smith there. You remember he attempted to take Cincinnati, and many citizens sold their property for little or nothing, and left. I said, General, I am astonished to see you here. I should think you would feel a little strange among these merchants. 'Well,' said he, 'I have been a little astonished myself. I never was treated better in my life.' That is the way we have been shaking hands across the bloody chasm. I have seen Gen. Beauregard treated and treated here. I have yet to see the first Northern man that has tried to wound the feelings of any man or woman of the South. Can you say as much of the South? [Cries of 'No, no!'] When Senator McCreery, of Kentucky, pronounced a eulogy on Gen. Lee upon the floor of this Hall, the Senate was there a Northern Senator that rose to throw calumny upon his memory? Not one! I say this is right. I have treated these men as my friends, but I don't like to be asked to go too far—to give and not receive. Don't ask us, as Senator Schurz has, to bury the men who fought through the land and trample their memories in the dust. I respect the memory of every man in the South who fought from conviction of duty. But I do ask that they be satisfied with a less sacrifice than the dishonoring of our living heroes and fallen dead."

In Favor of the Amendments but Opposed to their Enforcement.

Many years ago when Ben. Shillaber, Mrs. Partington, Ike, and all that crowd were literally a unit in advocating the Boston Carpet Bag the election of Gen. Jehiel Stebbins to the Presidency, and were carrying on the campaign with nearly as much vehemence as the Tribune and its crowd are now urging its candidate for the same position, the Prohibitory Liquor law excitement was at its height, and in order that the position of Jehiel Stebbins in that question might be understood, it was authoritatively announced that the General was in favor of the Maine law but opposed to its enforcement." Quite as satisfactory announcement is made by the Augusta (Ga.) Constitutionalist in respect to the later candidate for the Presidency, when it says: "It is not true to say that Mr. Greeley satisfully recognizes the validity of the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments, as does Grant and his Radical supporters. But it is equally true that he is opposed to any further oppression and unconstitutional measures upon the South under the pretext of carrying out those amendments. The candidates of Congress for Greeley seekts throughout the country are equally opposed and fully committed against that tyrannical line of policy."

Bowie-Knife Potter.

Hon. John F. Potter, of Wisconsin, whom every Republican in the land and every fire-eater in the South knows personally or by letter, has written a letter in response to an invitation to address the Waukesha Republican Club, in which, while declining the invitation on account of the serious illness of his mother, he assures the Club of his earnest sympathy in the cause for the furtherance of which it has been organized. Alluding to the Milwaukee Wisconsin says: "If there is an original, consistent and honest Republican in the State that one is John F. Potter, and his adherence to the party speaks most forcibly and conclusively in refutation of the calumnies of the 'Reform Party.' His testimony in behalf of the Republican Party and its Administration outweighs that of a hundred of such weather-cocks and sorcheads as John Farnsworth."

Enthusiasm of the Lucas County, Ohio, Republicans.

That was a glorious Republican ratification meeting in Toledo, Ohio, last Friday. The Toledo Blade says: "The campaign in Lucas County opened splendidly. For many years out-door meetings in the daytime in this city have not been largely attended, and fears were entertained by many that, notwithstanding the attraction of Gen. Noyes' presence, the attendance would be too limited to be an occasion of inspiration and encouragement. But those who feared for this occasion had not come to a knowledge of the deep and general interest felt in the issues of the campaign. Since 1860 no party has felt throughout every part of its membership such genuine and hearty enthusiasm as now pervades the Republican hosts. At the appointed hour yesterday afternoon the people came from the country in long procession of carriages and wagons; mechanics and manufacturers closed their shops and thronged their way to the place of meeting; merchants, for an hour or two, on a day when the city was thronged with customers, left their business with assumed or forced reluctance, to participate in the feast. When the meeting was called to order the largest audience of a political character ever gathered in this county was arrayed before the speaker's stand. Gen. Wager Swayne was called upon to preside, and introduced Gen. Noyes with earnest and heart-moving words. He witness the enthusiasm with which Gen. Swayne, a brave, crippled veteran of the war, introduced another crippled soldier, with whom he had been associated in the conflict with the rebels, was itself an inspiration and incentive to duty." The meetings were continued through the afternoon and evening, and were addressed by Gov. Noyes, Rev. R. W. Arnett, J. Madison Bell, Gen. Sherwood, and others, and a Grand Grant and Wilson Club was organized. The Blade says: "Thus closed the first full day in Toledo. Its fruits are an earnest of glorious victory in October and November."

Another Influential Maine Democrat for Grant.

Joel Colby, one of the most honored and influential Democrats in Somerset County, Maine, has declared against Greeley in a letter in which he says: "I am afraid to invest in that stock, because it takes in all that rebel element which sought the very life of the Government, and which was put down at the sacrifice of so many valuable lives and so much treasure. I cannot see why the country, today, financially, is not in a fair and prosperous condition. The national debt is being reduced, business is good. The laboring man was never better paid for his labor than at the present time, and all the necessaries of life are now at very fair prices. I cannot see any good in a change of administration at this time, but fear much evil. I prefer that the party in now power should continue another four years at least. Many of my Democratic brethren here are feeling as I do, and I am very much mistaken if they do not with me vote for the conqueror of the rebellion, this Fall."

The Colored Citizens of Minnesota.

The St. Paul Press publishes a circular, signed by a large number of colored citizens of Minnesota, declining to follow the advice volunteered to them by Charles Sumner, and pledging their support to Grant and Wilson. The Press says: "The list embraces, almost without exception, the name of every colored voter whose signature was solicited, and is a significant indication of the attitude which animates our colored fellow-citizens everywhere. They know that the Republican Party gave them their freedom and their rights of citizenship, in spite of the utmost efforts of the organization styling itself Democratic, and they do not now propose to put themselves into the power of their life-long enemies. They will trust their tried friends to maintain what has already been accomplished, and they will not participate in Mr. Sumner's personal quarrels."

Disciplining the Democracy.

Denying the World's dictum that "a genuine representative Democratic National Convention has authority to bind its constituents, that is to say, to bind the whole Democratic Party," the Chicago Tribune, the leading Democratic organ of the West, if not of the Union, says: "A genuine representative Democratic National Convention has no authority whatever to bind anybody. If any Democrat is dissatisfied with the action of such a convention, he has a perfect right to express his dissatisfaction in any lawful way. And if a convention has for its constituents the only the professional politicians and spotte-seekers, and it is proposed the opposite of Democratic principles for the acceptance of Democrats, and it is asks Democrats to vote for the most violently anti-democratic of all Anti-Democrats, then the action of such a convention, so far from being binding upon Democrats, may very properly be repudiated by Democrats, and the Convention itself may properly be regarded as the enemy of Democracy, and treated accordingly. No one need be surprised, and no one has the least right to complain, if Democrats proclaim their revolt against Democratic discipline, when such discipline is exercised to drag them into the support of Anti-Democratic principles and the bitterest and most dangerous enemies of those principles. It is not unnatural that Democrats should proclaim their hostility to a party which proclaims its own hostility to Democratic principles by choosing for its standard-bearer the most inveterate and implacable enemy of those principles. It is not strange that Democrats should revolt against such discipline, and proclaim their hostility to such a party."

The Union League of America for Grant and Wilson.

A private meeting of the National Executive Committee of the Union League of America was held yesterday afternoon. Gov. John W. Geary, of Pennsylvania, in the chair. Reports of an encouraging character were received from the various States. Among the resolutions passed were the following:

Whereas, The National Council at its last meeting pledged the Union League of America to the support of the nominees of the National Convention of the Union Republican Party; therefore, for the purpose of carrying out the instructions of the National Council,

Resolved, That the National Executive Committee calls upon all members of the Union League of America throughout the United States to rally around the nominees of the Union Republican Party, Grant and Wilson, and use all their energies for the triumph of the Republican Party during the present national campaign.

Resolved, That the above resolution be transmitted to the various State Councils, with instructions to have the same promulgated throughout their respective jurisdictions, and requiring that adherence to the principles and candidates of the Republican Party shall be an essential condition of admission to the higher degree of the Union League.

Vacancies in the officers and members of the Committee were filled as follows: First Vice-President—Gov. Marshall Jewell, of Connecticut; Second Vice-President—Judge A. A. Knight, of Florida. Members of the President Committee—Hon. Ged. A. Halsey, of New-Jersey; Hon. A. B. Cornell, of New-York; Hon. Silas B. Dutcher, of New-York.

The resignation of F. Carlisle, of Michigan, was received, and Gov. Baldwin, of that State, was appointed to fill the vacancy.

The following was passed in regard to North Carolina:

Resolved, That the thanks of the National Executive Committee are hereby tendered to our brethren of North Carolina, who, undaunted by the action of their State Convention in forbidding them to hold regular meetings, were still found faithful in the hour of trial, thereby sending a thrill of joy through the ranks of the Union League throughout the United States.

After the transaction of a large amount of campaign business, the Committee adjourned, subject to the call of the Chair.

A Fraud.

The annexed circular is, we learn, being distributed largely in the West. It is of course a baseless fraud. There is no such Club, and its officers are bogus. Our Western exchanges should call attention to it:

ROOMS OF THE NATIONAL GRANT CLUB,
203 SPRING-STREET, NEW-YORK, June 10, '72.

Mr. H. J. Smith:

DEAR SIR—You will please remit to this office, without delay, the sum of ten dollars.

This Association is composed of eighty-four prominent and wealthy citizens of New-York, each of whom has subscribed the sum of $1,000. They will devote their whole energies during the present campaign to bring about the election of Gen. Grant to the Presidency. You are aware, of course, that immense sums of money are required to conduct a Presidential campaign. Political speakers are to be paid; thousands of banners to be raised in all parts of the Republic; special trains are to be paid for; thousands of dollars are to be paid for advertising in many journals. Other items could be enumerated which are inseparable from expense in all political campaigns.

Money collected by this Association will be disbursed in the Western States and in Pennsylvania.

Hon. W. JACKSON CARPENTER, President.
Hon. PAULMIER WATERS, Vice-President.
Ex-Judge MARSHALL SCUDDER, Treasurer.

Enthusiastic German Republican Rally.

The German Republicans of the Twelfth Assembly District met last evening at Dry-dock Hall, No. 201 East Fourth-street, to raise a Grant and Wilson banner. The houses in the vicinity were brilliantly illuminated for about two or three blocks with Chinese lanterns during the ceremony of the banner-raising. The meeting inside was organized by the President, Mr. Louis Schradt, and the music corps of the Eleventh Regiment was in attendance. Stirring addresses were delivered by Messrs. Wm. Gallmann, the President of the German Republican Central Committee, and several others addressed the meeting.

The Greeley Ratification Swearing and Woe Among the Clans.

The Piebald party are going to have a grand splurge on the 12th of next month, and it might be supposed that the occasion would be one of unmixed rejoicing among the warriors of Tammany. But, on the contrary, it is a source of the bitterest wailing. All the petty chieftains of the miserable gangs who in past times have done the bidding of the party by wrecking polling-booths, assaulting voters, repeating, stealing polling-books and disgracing American institutions generally, are in grief. It takes them all their spare cash to keep their hordes together, and they have hitherto looked to meetings like the contemplated September splurge as sources of revenue. But fortunately for society the perennial streams or greenbacks that keps them flourishing have been cut off by Controller Green, and the Reformers, and those unhappy chiefs who asked for money from the Chairman of the Committee of Arrangements, have been offered such manifestations of and insulting joys as Roman candles, green fire and rockets. It is very doubtful if the Freeman guard will turn out at the appointed time unless a judicious distribution is made of part of that $250,000 which Marshall O. Roberts is ready to contribute to the Greeley cause. The Mathew T. Brennan Association, has, according to report, sent delegates to the Committee to learn definitely how much the party of purity and reform will stand. Many anxious ones are waiting for the answer.

The Herald and Greeley.

The New-York Staats Zeitung says: "The Herald has abandoned Greeley. The Herald is a good weathercock. Only those who are blind can fail to see that Greeley's chances are rapidly waning. The 'sober second thought' has opened the way to a return to reason."

Straws from Travelers.

A correspondent of the Fort Dodge (Iowa) Messenger communicates the following: "As the Republicans of glorious young Iowa are deeply interested in the results of the Presidential election, I give for their encouragement a few items gathered in my travels in Michigan, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois and Iowa during the last few weeks. Last Monday I left Milwaukee on the noon train for Chicago. On the way we took a vote of passengers for President. It stood 70 for Grant and 31 for Greeley. On Tuesday, coming through Illinois on the North-western, the vote stood 28 for Grant and 8 for Greeley. Coming over the D. L. and M. Railroad from Cedar Rapids to Cedar Falls, the vote stood 9 for Grant and 6 for Greeley. I met a friend at Cedar Falls who had come through from New-Hampshire, and he informed me that votes taken on all the trains as he came through stood about one-third more for Grant than for Greeley. I saw another gentleman who had been traveling in Indiana and Ohio and had taken pains to canvass all trains on which he had traveled. He stated that only in one instance had the vote cast for Greeley come nearly equal to the Grant vote. In all other instances the vote was about one-third more for Grant than Greeley."

Long Island Politics.

A meeting of the Republican electors of Wintestone, Long Island, was held at Bullus Hotel, on Friday last, Mr. Robert Willets in the chair. The business of organization was at once entered upon, and addresses were made by the Chairman, Messrs. D. A. Higgins, A. H. Kissam and others. It was

Resolved, That a club be formed, to be known as "The Grant and Wilson Club of Wintestone."

A committee submitted to the meeting the following names: For President, Robert Willets; Vice-Presidents, A. B. Wright, B. J. Hathaway, George W. Van Steen, C. W. Smith, John Barrow, A. A. Pinner, J. THE PINE-TREE STATE.

Speech of Senator Trumbull at Portland.

The Last Resort of the Liberals a Failure—The State Stronger Than Ever for Grant—Republican Meetings at Other Points.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

PORTLAND, Me., Aug. 26.—Senator Lyman Trumbull made his third speech in Maine tonight at the City Hall in this place. The hall was well filled; two or three hundred had to stand, while the galleries contained a large number of ladies—a somewhat unusual thing at Democratic gatherings, out of New-England at any rate. So there were about 2,500 people present. Mr. Trumbull was escorted to the hall and presented to the audience by an appropriate embroidering of apostate Republicans, the filling up being composed of the Greeley Democracy. The meeting was a good one for that side, even though many of the Republicans of Portland, who wanted to hear the malignant utterances of Mr. Trumbull, helped to fill the benches. The speech made by Mr. Trumbull is the same one he has delivered in the West. After paying a handsome tribute to New-England, he launched at once into the framework of his assault. His first assertion was to deny that the Republican Party or Gen. Grant had anything to do with putting down the rebellion. He said it was the American people who put it down, and the inference was clearly drawn that Gen. Grant had no more share in it and deserved no more credit for it than any one of the American people. His next point, without waiting to dwell on a subject which brought up unpleasant memories in his audience, was the finances. These he boldly denounced as scandalous and disgraceful, and alleged that they were nevertheless the boast of the ring that "runs the Administration," as he elegantly expressed it. Giving the book-keeping of the Treasury a serious criticism, he declared his charges proved, and said the Administration deserved to be hurled from power for such book-keeping. Then he took up the Syndicate business, and as a specimen of his misrepresentations, of which he would be thoroughly ashamed if his present associations did not prevent, he deliberately concealed from his audience the fact that the Funding act required that ninety days' notice should be given of the redemption of the five-twenties, and that they couldn't be redeemed until the new bonds were sold. His ingenuity in this matter was paralleled only by his mendacity. His next point of attack was the Secor claims, which he has rehearsed on every occasion, and ridiculed the report of the House Committee, saying nothing, however, about the fact that the majority of the Greeleyites on the Committee vindicated the Secretary. His next allegation was that he believed, and he said it with great vehemence, seeking to create the impression of a fact, that he believed the public money in the Treasury was being used to carry the elections. He reiterated this shortly afterward by saying that while he did not absolutely charge it, he said the money might be, and he believed it actually was being used to carry elections. Then he instanced a bank out West which had just been designated a national depository, whose President was a Presidential elector for Grant and Wilson. He broadly insinuated, what he dared not say, that half a million dollars had been placed on deposit in that bank, with an intimation that it would not be wanted for a few months, and might be loaned as good interest.

His audience—or at least the Greeley portion of it—greedily accepted the insinuation as an established fact. His next indictment was the usurpations of power on the part of the Administration. He dwelt with gusto upon what he termed the "Senatorial Ring," and took up the Election laws, which he discussed at length. He instanced no fact or case of abuse, but dealt upon the possibilities of their abuse. Here is a rich specimen of his false and malignant utterances. He charged that under the law of 1870 Deputy Marshals could and would be placed at five dollars per day throughout the South to control the elections, in the face of the fact, which Mr. Trumbull knows as well as he knows his own name, that the law does not apply to more than five or six cities in the entire Southern States, namely those having more than 20,000 inhabitants. After recapitulating the efforts of the ring, as he styled the Senate, to sustain themselves in power, he invited his audience to help him hurl the present despots from power, to which invitation, to Democrat-Reb-pop a large portion of his hearers responded with vehement applause.

Having finished his excoriation, he proceeded to vindicate his apostacy, and that of his fellow-Greeleyites. He reiterated his claim to credit for all the Republican Party had ever achieved, and said that if the Party had ever achieved anything else, if it had ever achieved, or attempted to achieve, any other object than that which he alluded to the grand achievement of the civil and political equality of all men, there was no applause. It fell dead. He played humorously on the political embarrassments which prevent Republicans voting for Democrats, and yet did not prevent Democrats from voting with Republicans. He touched with grim humor upon Mr. Greeley's early position on secession, and on the payment for slaves; and argued that whatever he held then he did not so hold now. Then he shot off into civil service reform, and reiterated the old falsehood that the civil service report saved the one hundred millions lost to the revenue annually, through the corruptions of the service, which he declared the worst the country ever saw. All this would be reformed, he said, by the election of Mr. Greeley. He made no allusion to the two five-score recommendations which makes the civil service so much in need of reform.

Mr. Trumbull spoke nearly two hours, and in conclusion, he expressed the opinion that Mr. Greeley would be elected, and that there were enough Liberals in Maine voting with the Democrats, or those who were heretofore Democrats, to carry the State for Greeley. His peroration was composed of Greeley, Chorpenning, Boutwell, Syndicate Grant, &c., in equal parts. At the close three cheers were called for, when half the audience rose, and the rest kept their seats, indicating the extent to which the audience failed to sympathize with the speaker. There was a marked absence of enthusiasm, caused partly by the coldness of manner of Mr. Trumbull, but chiefly by the fact, now clear as noonday, that the spirit of the Greeleyite campaign is broken in this State. The was intended to be the great meeting in this part of the State; it was, on the contrary, only a fair evening meeting for Portland.

No harm will come from Mr. Trumbull's efforts in this State; he is sharply flanked by the Republican Campaign management. He spoke at Rockford on Friday night, and Gen. John M. Harlan, of Louisville, protested a powerful antidote for his poison there to-night. His speech here will be followed by the great Republican meeting of to-morrow, while his speech at Augusta, on Tuesday, will be followed by the Republican demonstration there on Friday. Wednesday he speaks at Bangor, to be preceded Tuesday by Bingham, and followed on Thursday by Wilson and Butler. The Republican meeting here to-morrow will be both a soldiers' and citizens' demonstration. Reduced fare arrangements have been made with all the Railroads, and large delegations are announced from Bangor, Augusta, Lewiston, Biddeford, Saco, Rochester, &c.

The day demonstration includes a meeting at the City Hall in the afternoon, at which Gen. Harlan, Gen. Butler, Gen. Burnside and Gen. Caldwell will speak. The evening demonstration will include a parade of 2,000 torches and another meeting at City Hall, at which Senator Wilson and Fred. Douglass will speak. The campaign grows warmer with each day, and it is certain that the Republicans are steadily gaining ground.

The Campaign in Cumberland County—Increased Prospects of Success.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

GORHAM, Me., Aug. 26.—This part of Cumberland County has been thoroughly aroused, and for the past few days the Republican enthusiasm has increased rapidly. Saturday last we had a handsome meeting, which was addressed by Col. J. H. Warwick, of New-York, and to-night nearly a thousand persons assembled to hear Fred. Douglass' wonderful eloquence and keen logic. His effort was one of his very best, and was received with great favor. Gorham will gain handsomely on last year's vote.

Large Political Meeting in the Penobscot Valley—Addresses by Hon. J. A. Bingham and Others.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ORONO, Me., Aug. 26.—The Penobscot Valley was ablaze with enthusiasm to-night, occasioned by the largest political turnout ever held in this part of the country since 1856. The attractions of the evening were one of Hon. John A. Bingham's eloquent and logical speeches, and a telling effort from John A. Peters, our present member of Congress. Judge Bingham is doing a world of good in causing the scales to drop from the eyes of men who have been unwittingly drawn into the ranks of Greeleyism, and we rejoice that we are to have him in old Penobscot all this week. Rest assured the account she will give two weeks hence will be satisfactory, especially on our copperhead adversary for Congress, Emery, whom we shall bury deeper than ever.

VERMONT.

The Republican Canvass in Active Operation—Position of the State in Respect to the Election.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

SPRINGFIELD, Vt., Aug. 26.—The last week of the active canvassing has begun, and up to Saturday night an immense amount of political work throughout the State will be done. There are to be several large meetings in the interest of the Republican ticket and the Administration. On Wednesday there will be a grand rally at this place for Orleans and the contiguous counties. There will also be one of the greatest demonstrations of the campaign the same day at St. Albans. On Thursday, Bradford, in Orange County, will have quite an important demonstration. On Friday Bellows Falls will receive the Republican delegates from the surrounding towns. On Saturday there will be the last, and it is intended to be the greatest of the political gatherings in the State. Meantime there are many meetings of more importance, mostly local in character, in nearly all the counties. There is a brightening prospect as the day of election approaches, that the Republican majority of two years ago will be increased, and a general belief prevails that it will set in bad weather, or something else may happen, to prevent the full vote of the State from being polled, and it is that case there will be a slight reduction in this (Orleans) county. The Greeley vote will draw away, according to the best information, about 150 votes, which is about eight or nine to every hundred Republicans voting in the last election. This is a liberal allowance. There are nearly the same number of Democrats who will not vote for Greeley, but who will probably vote the fusion State ticket. From all parts of the State come reports of a decrease in the number of those who were supposed some time ago to be going over to the Liberal standard, and the withdrawal of Republican votes may be much less than has been allowed. The most sanguine of the Liberals claim 2,000 to 3,000 Republican votes. Few Republicans concede more than 1,500 to 2,000. To offset this, there are 20,000 Grant Republicans who did not vote at all in the last election, who are counted upon to make up any loss. Unfortunately there are not Democrats enough in the State to make any particular efforts to gain recruits from that quarter profitable. Some, however, will come of themselves. The result is certain not to give any substantial encouragement to the opposition.

MICHIGAN.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

JACKSON, Mich., Aug. 26.—Col. Burroughs, of Kalamazoo, gave a scathing review of the Liberal Republican Democracy movement tonight, demanding which was the party most fitted to govern, that which conducted us safely through the war and had brought peace and prosperity since, or the rebels and sorcheads who had been its worst enemies. The meeting closed with three rousing cheers for Grant and Wilson. The meeting was large and enthusiastic.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Large Republican Gathering in Harrisburg.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

HARRISBURG, Penn., Aug. 26.—One of the largest Republican meetings ever held in this city took place to-night, and was addressed by Hon. John Scott, of Huntington, and Col. Thomas Fitzgerald, of Philadelphia, and others.

Trouble in the Labor Reform Movement.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Aug. 26.—Henry L. Acker, Chairman of the Labor Reform State Central Committee, denounces as an unfounded canard the report of a State Convention of the Labor Reform Party said to have been held in this city on the 22d inst. He declares that no such Convention was held; that the reported proceedings thereat are a fraud, and that the parties whose names appear in the reports are unknown in connection with the Labor Reform Party of Pennsylvania.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Thirty-One Counties Heard From—The Vote of the New Constitution Still in Doubt.

WHEELING, West Va., Aug. 26.—A special dispatch to the Chronicle says: Thirty-one counties, reported up to noon today, give Jacob 8,388 majority; twenty-eight counties give 1,267 majority against the Constitution. Davis, the independent Democrat for Congress, is elected in this district.

The Vote in the Third Congressional District.

GREENBRIER, WHITE SULPHER SPRINGS, West Va., Aug. 26.—In this, the Third Congressional District, the nine counties heard from give Camden a majority of 1,000. The twelve counties unheard from will, at a fair estimate, give Camden 2,500 majority; making his majority in the district 3,500.

CONNECTICUT.

Death of Hon. Ralph J. Ingersoll.

NEW-HAVEN, Conn., Aug. 26.—Hon. Ralph J. Ingersoll died in this city at 6 o'clock this morning, after a short illness, in the eighty-fourth year of his age. He was for many years a leading lawyer in this State; he represented New-Haven in the State Legislature during seven consecutive years from 1819; he served in Congress four consecutive terms from 1826, and was upon important committees, including the Committee on Ways and Means. After his Congressional career he resumed the practice of the law in New-Haven, and was State Attorney. He was offered the appointment of Unused State Senator, but declined, not wishing to re-enter political life. He was appointed Minister Plenipotentiary to Russia by President Polk, and remained abroad for two years. He had since lived quietly in this city.

"Precious Stones" from Plano Blanco—The Indian Troubles Exaggerated—An Earthquake at Kanab.

SALT LAKE CITY, Aug. 26.—Mr. Savage's expedition, fitted out in this city some four weeks ago, to search for precious gems, has been heard from. A letter was received here this afternoon, dated Plano Blanco, New-Mexico, Aug. 17, with a consignment of about a quart of rubies, emeralds, garnets, opals, and a variety of bright stones, supposed to be diamonds. Crowds of people are examining the specimens with much interest. A sample of the whole lot will be forwarded to lapidaries in New-York to-morrow. Mr. Savage writes that he will send another collection, of better quality, in a few days.

Gen. Ord returned from the South last night, and telegraphed Gen. Sheridan today that the Indian troubles have been much exaggerated. He says that all the Indians having reservations have gone home. There may be a fight on the San Pete, but it will not be serious. He expects the troops back in three weeks.

Three shocks of earthquake were felt in Kanab, the southern section of the Territory.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

A Reign of Terror in Salisbury, N. C.—Cheering Reports from Alabama—Miscellaneous Matters.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—Information has been received here by high officials to the effect that the condition of affairs in North Carolina, particularly in Saulsbury and vicinity, is such that unless prompt measures are taken there is very great danger of a general reign of lawlessness and crime. It seems that Saulsbury at the present time is virtually in the possession of a mob of armed rebels, and that the City authorities are either powerless or unwilling to preserve the peace, and preserve life and property. The Associated Press agents fail to communicate the exact condition of affairs, or, indeed, to send anything at all bearing upon the situation. The disorder is occasioned principally by H. H. Helper, a brother of Impending Crisis Helper, who is publishing a Greeley organ, filled with the grossest abuse of everyone in sympathy with the Administration and the Republican Party. An abusive attack on Mr. Henderson, Assessor of internal revenue, and one of the leading politicians in that section, printed by Helper a few days ago, led to a caning of Helper by Henderson. Helper's friends immediately organized a gang of roughs and threatened Mr. Henderson's life. Henderson, in self-defense, was compelled to fire upon them, and since then there have been the wildest scenes of disorder. A general reign of violence and intimidation is being inaugurated by the ex-rebels and Greeley party. On the same night and in the same house in which Henderson was attacked, Col. H. C. Walser, Presidential elector on the Republican ticket, was brutally maltreated and nearly beaten to death.

ALABAMA.

Judge Martin, Sixth Auditor of the Treasury Department, who has just returned here from Alabama, brings highly encouraging accounts of the campaign in that State. The colored vote is unanimous for the Republican ticket, and there is very little doubt that the State will give its electoral vote for Gen. Grant in November.

COLORED MILITIA GOING TO RICHMOND.

A colored military organization of this city, the "Stanton Battalion," having obtained the requisite permission of the Government of Virginia to take arms into that Commonwealth, which is necessary under the laws of the State, will shortly make a visit to the colored military organizations of Richmond.

STEAM-BOAT BOILERS MUST BE CLEANED.

The question having been presented to the Treasury Department whether a Steam-boat Inspector can exempt a steamer from cleaning her boilers, a response has been made that it is imperative that means be provided for removing mud and sediment from all parts of boilers when under pressure of steam, and that the Inspectors are to be governed by the rules of the Board of Supervising Inspectors in regard to the kind of appliances used.

POSTAL CARDS.

Some idea of the extent of disappointment experienced throughout the country by the recent discovery that the Post-office Department will have to wait for a specific appropriation by Congress before it can furnish the postal cards, may be obtained from the statement that up to today applications have been made to the Department for over 2,000,000 of these cards, and about twenty-five informal proposals have been made by manufacturers to supply them after the designs have been determined.

THE REVENUE MARINE.

The following changes of engineer officers of the United States Revenue Marine Corps have been made: First Assistant Engineer Joseph L. Reilly has been detached from the Mahoning at Boston, and ordered to the Jasmine, at New-York; First Assistant Polhemus, has been detached from the Jasmine and ordered to the Seward, at Wilmington, N. C.; Second Assistant Gerard M. Robinson has been detached from the Seward and ordered to the Search, at Philadelphia; Second Assistant Engineer James Ogden detached from the Search, and ordered to the Mahoning.

NAVAL NEWS.

The Yantic dropped down to the naval anchorage at Norfolk on the 24th, preparatory to going to sea.

The Resaca arrived at Papiti, Tahiti, June 2, thirty days from Callao, after a pleasant passage. Lieut.-Commander N. Green, reports that the Consul at Paputi informed him that the whaling bark William Gifford arrived at that port a short time previous in charge of the crew, the crew having mutinied and dethroned the Captain for ill-treatment, and for prostituting his crew, and that he (the Consul) had placed the vessel in charge of another person, and that she had sailed for San Francisco on the morning of the arrival of the Resaca. The French corvette Vandine was in port. The Resaca would give li

"RECONCILIATION."

To the Editors of the Boston Journal:

SIRS: It is especially noteworthy that the principal claim which Mr. Greeley presents to the American people for their suffrages, as the great pacificator between North and South, is based upon falsehood, and enforced by an egotism as disgusting as it is generous. Instead of elevating him to the Presidential chair, they will show by their action at the polls in November that they have sufficient self-respect left to treat a slanderer according to his deserts. I refer, of course, to the loyal men of the land, who constitute its governing power, whose patriotism is unquestionable, and upon whose intelligence and virtue depend the perpetuity of our free institutions. These he has been busy, for the past year, in aspersing as animated by a hateful and vindictive spirit toward the South, unwilling to be reconciled, and exercising a despotic control over her by a flagrant perversion of the powers of the General Government. The criminality in this matter has been wholly theirs; she has been the unhappy victim, despoiled of her rights, thwarted in her patriotic purposes, injured in her interests to the verge of ruin, given over a prey to remorseless Northern "carpet-baggers," yet all the while exhibiting such a patient, long-suffering disposition, such a yearning desire for reconciliation, as should cause even adamantine hearts to relent.

This is the position of the two parties, as repetitiously set forth by Mr. Greeley and his organ, ad nauseam. He has no prejudices to abandon, no feelings of unkindness to gratify, no remembrances of wrongs to cherish! "Mary's little lamb" may be set down as almost wolfish in comparison! He is the incarnation of all that is magnanimous and forgiving, a passionate follower of the Prince of Peace! Not all the denominational sermons and harangues of the rebellion have left upon his understanding, conscience, or heart, any impression, whether for retrospection in the past or guidance in the future. Let them be forever forgotten! Multiplied a hundred fold, they could not outrun his clemency. Like the disembiding Duke of Gloucester, with an eye to the main chance, he proclaims:

> "'Tis death to me to be at enmity;
> I hate it and desire all good men's love;
> * * * I entreat true peace
> Of you, my noble cousin Buckingham,
> If ever any grudge were lodged between us;
> Of you, Lord Rivers, and Lord Grey, of you;
> That all without desert have frown'd on me;
> Dukes, earls, lords, gentlemen; indeed, of all.
> I do not know that Englishman alive
> With whom my soul is any jot at odds,
> More than the infant that is born to-night;
> I thank my God for my humility."

Gloucester was aiming to be Richard III. Greeley is as eager to be our next President. He parades his humility and forgiving temper with the same unctuous and sanctimonious hypocrisy ines the very words of the wily crooked-backed aspirant; and it is only necessary to substitute Beauregard for Buckingham, Jeff. Davis for Lord Rivers, Robert Toombs for Lord Grey, with all the rank and file of rebeldom for the other parties named, to make the parallel complete.

In her bitter hostility to the Government, before the rebellion, during its prosecution, or since its suppression, the North has never manifested or cherished any unkindness; and it is a slander of the first magnitude to assert the contrary. Before that perfidious uprising, for seventy years, she left nothing undone to propitiate the malignant overbearing and defiant spirit of the South, making the most humiliating concessions, acquiescing in the most flagrant wrongs, and allowing herself to be reduced to abject vassalage—all for the sake of "peace," falsely so called. Nor has she to this day fully recovered her self-respect, or wholly freed herself from the malignant influence of that long-extended slaveholding domination.

If there ever could be an occasion for sectional animosity to the bitterest extent on her part, it was furnished by the worse than savage warfare which was carried on by the South during her unremittable efforts to dismember the Republic. A hundred thousand Northern homes were filled with lamentation and woe for the loss of fathers, husbands, sons and brothers, who, but for this hideous revolt, would now be living to make those desolate homes radiant with happiness. At least forty thousand of them died in Southern prisons, by starvation, and the infliction of every manly and outrage that hellish malignity could originate. Witness Andersonville, witness Fort Pillow, to all coming generations, that the people of the South, demonized by their accursed slave system, carried on their bloody struggle like demons! If they failed to reduce to ashes the principal Northern cities by the torch of incendiarism, or to spread loathsome and deadly contagions at the North by an infernal device, it was only as they failed to accomplish their treasonable purposes generally. Their contempt for the people of the North exhausted the language of invective, and their hatred of them "burned to the lowest hell." Let them speak for themselves:

> "We have got to hating everything with the prefix free—free farms, free labor, free society, free will, free thinking, free children and free schools, all being to the same brood of damnable isms. But the misery of all these abom nations is the New-England system of free schools, that have turned her cities to Sodoms and Gomorrahs." * * * "Free society! We sicken of the name. What is it but a commonwealth of greasy mechanics, filthy operatives, small-fisted farmers, and moon-struck theorists? All the Northern states, and especially the New-England States, are devoid of society fitted even for well-bred gentlemen." * * * "Since the foul invaders have polluted our soil with their footsteps, an irrepressible eagerness to give them bloody graves has fired all classes. We knew no patronizing mercy on account of the restless desire to be butchering the invading ruffians." * * * "Swear eternal hatred of a treacherous foe, whose only safety is in your defeat and subjugation." * * * "The rabble of vagabonds and cut-throats enlisted by Lincoln's agents to execute his foul purposes—we would meet them as robbers and murderers assailing the safety and peace of our homes." * * * "Southern soldiers ask no better odds than one to three Yankees, and one to six of the Eastern Yankees." * * * "Lincoln's Government is capable of any deed of hellish perfidy, of atrocious cruelty, of damning infamy, to accomplish its ends." * * * "Mr. Lincoln is a fit successor and representative of the cruel King who thirsted for the blood of the infant Jesus." * * * "Davis is the very soul of courage, honor, chivalry; Lincoln is a cur dog, cowering, filled with abject fear, drunk half the time, occasionally foolishly facetious, whistling to keep his courage up." * * * "We doubt if any society since that of Sodom and Gomorrah has ever been more thoroughly steeped in every species of vice than that of the Yankees." * * * "Let us prefer even for our loved sons the charnel-house as a home, than loathsome vassalage to a tyrant already sunk below the contempt of the civilized world." * * * "Well, let them come—those minions of the North. We'll meet them in a way they least expect; we'll glut our carrion crows with their heavy carcasses, and leave their bleaching bones to enrich our soil." * * * "To be captured in open and manly fight by a nation of gentlemen, and subjected to their sway, might not drive us raving distracted with rage and shame; but for Yankees—the most contemptible and detestable of God's creation—the vile wretches whose daily sustenance consists in the refuse of all other people—for they eat nothing that anybody else will buy—for them to lord it over us!—the English language must be enlarged, new words must be invented, to express the extent and depth of our feelings of mortification and shame. We would bring the enfranchised slaves back to their true conditions. They have always, in our property, looked upon themselves as our social inferiors—as our equals. Their uprising has all the characteristics of a ferocious servile insurrection. They have burst the bonds of servitude, and are manumitted; they are more than the brutal passions of a liberated wild beast, to restore them to their normal condition of vassalage, and teach them that cap in hand is the proper attitude of the servant before his master!"

These are only samples of volumes of similar extracts that could be compiled from Southern journals during the rebellion; and, certainly, they were eminently calculated to excite all that is wrathful and vindictive in the human breast by way of retaliation—to say nothing of the startling atrocities perpetrated by the rebels, perfidiously violating flags of truce, deliberately making lanterns out of the skulls of Northern soldiers, and trinkets out of their bones, shooting them in sport or malice behind their prison bars, and treating them with a barbarity to which no domestic brutes would be subjected.

Yet no one knows better than Mr. Greeley that these bitter provocations failed to excite any revengeful feelings; that the war was conducted by the General Government with unexampled forbearance and clemency; that the Northern soldiers were animated by patriotic and not sectional motives; that the Northern journals advocated no treatment of the rebellious South at variance with the most advanced views of civilization in such cases; that Southern prisoners were fed and dealt with in marked contrast with the treatment to which Northern ones were subjected by their captors; and that at no time during the war did the people of the North evince any animosity to the South as such, or need to be reminded how pleasant a thing it is to clasp hands in amity, provided it be done in good faith, and not in dissimulation for an ulterior purpose. Mr. Greeley dedicated the second volume of his American Conflict, as a merited tribute, "to the Union Volunteers of 1861-4, who flew to the rescue of their imperiled country because they so loved her that they joyfully proffered their own lives to save hers." His sectional feeling here!

When Gen. Lee surrendered to Gen. Grant, no humiliating conditions were imposed, only this—"Each officer and man will be allowed to return to his home, not to be disturbed by United States authority so long as they observe their parole and the laws in force where they may reside." Most extraordinary leniency! "There were many in the North," says Mr. Greeley in his work, "who deemed Grant quite too generous in fixing the terms of Lee's capitulation; but their hesitating utterances were drowned in the general burst of gladness and thanksgiving over the virtual collapse of the rebellion." And, to further to illustrate the noble spirit that animated the conquering party, he says that "when the Confederates took their way severally to their respective homes, many of them were supplied with transportation, as well as food, by the Government they had fought so long to subvert and destroy."

It was Andrew Johnson, of Tennessee, the successor of the martyred Lincoln, and not a Northern man, who said: "The American people must be taught to know and understand that treason is a crime, and must be punished as a crime. It must not be regarded as a mere difference of political opinion. It must not be excused as an unsuccessful rebellion, to be overlooked and forgiven. It is a crime before which all other crimes sink into insignificance, and, in saying this, it must not be considered that I am influenced by angry or revengeful feelings." Nevertheless—and this was an act of grace—he has weakened the foundations of the Government—not one of the traitors has ever been punished or arraigned because of his treasonable conduct! Only some of the most prominent instigators have been deprived of the right to hold office under the Government, though not of the right to vote; and these now constitute a very insignificant number. For their just exclusion from those places of trust which they so perfidiously betrayed, and their treasonable misleading the Southern masses, Mr. Greeley, joined by the whole rebel crew, is hotly denouncing the Administration as exercising unmerited severity, and insolently demanding a universal amnesty, as a measure no longer to be withheld! He proposes, indeed, to speak in the interest of peace; but the Government that purchases such a peace, on such conditions, and in consequence of such outcries, will be sowing the wind, only to reap the whirlwind.

If, before the rebellion and during the same, neither the General Government nor the people of the North felt or manifested any alienation from the South, wherein have they since exhibited a different spirit? Nowhere! The Government has extended the shield of its protection over all classes impartially; it has sought the suppression of lawless gangs engaged in whipping, maiming, and murdering innocent citizens on account of their complexion and loyalty; and then only when the feeble Government was inoperative, either through fear or willing complicity. But no law-abiding persons have said any just cause of complaint. Congress appropriated millions of dollars to succor the destitute Southern population after the war, thus returning good for evil and blessing for cursing, and private munificence at the North has contributed other millions to the same humane purpose, and the establishment of schools of every grade, that darkness may give place for light, and a true reconciliation be effected in accordance with the golden rule.

Go through the source North, and no expressions will be heard inimical to the rights or interests of the South. Every Southern man who has been on her soil since the war ended knows that he has been met with a kindness which could not have been reasonably expected. The South is an immensely fertile region, and consequently magnanimous and peaceable. She leads the world in the forgiveness of enemies; there is in all history no approach to her exceeding clemency. For Mr. Greeley, therefore, to ask her to be reconciled to the South is grossly to insult her; and every son of hers should feel it as a personal wound, and remonstrate with Mr. Greeley in a manly and emphatic way. Her heart has ever been lifted far above all sectionalism, and true to the motto emblazoned on the banner of her patriotism, "Our country, our whole country, and nothing but our country."

Let Mr. Greeley cease casting upon her his slanderous imputations, and stop his senseless talk to her of "clasping hands over a bloody chasm." It is only for the South to show—by deeds, not words—that she is as truly loyal and as broadly national, to make an end of all our divisions. The sentiment is alone on her part.

WM. LLOYD GARRISON.

BOSTON, Aug. 23, 1872.

Which is the Reform Party?

FRED. DOUGLASS, SAUER AND WOODFORD.

From the Cincinnati Post, Aug. 24, 1872.

If evidence was ever needed to show which of the parties is the true Reform party, it has been given, in the most substantial and satisfactory form, by the Republican State Convention, that nominated the electoral ticket.

A union that combines in such remarkable measure all the elements of progress, offering to all the classes of our population the same equal rights, and attesting this by deeds, is above all attacks which the intolerance of a reactionary mob ever invented to divide liberty-loving Republicans, whose greatest pride is to emulate each other. Sumner's abortive attempt to arouse the passions of the colored man against the Republican Party, Schurz's endeavors to estrange the German-born element, and his charge that the Republican Party harbors Know-nothing tendencies—all this agitation is shipwrecked upon that Gibraltar manifest, "equal rights for all," as exemplified and carried into practice by the Republican State Convention of New-York in its choice for Presidential electors at large.

Fred. Douglass, Emil Sauer and Stewart L. Woodford form a triumvirate, which shows on its face the utter hollowness of these attacks upon the Republican Party, that charge it with native Know-Nothing proclivities.

The war for the preservation of the Union did not alone destroy slavery, it also killed the intolerant spirit of nativism, and the demise of that spirit was atoned by the blood of thousands of our German-born American soldiers on the battle-field. And what little shadow of that spirit is yet stalking through the land, is occasionally seen in the ranks of the former slaveholders, and throws its influence into the scales for the Democratic candidate—Horace Greeley. A narrow-minded, intolerant party does not equally share the highest offices of honor among the component parts of our population.

Fred. Douglass, the talented and unblemished champion of that race of men, against which the American people, especially the Democratic Party, have committed the greatest crime on earth, he is now put up at the very front of our electoral ticket as a mark of our full and unqualified recognition of the Republican doctrine of "equal rights for all."

And at the very moment when the Republican Party of the Empire State gives this tangible evidence of its good faith and determination to vindicate all the human rights of the "chattels" of old, the Democratic Party moves earth, heaven and hell to gain a victory for a proposed State Constitution in a former slave territory, West Virginia, which contains a clause disqualifying the colored man from holding any office or public position at all.

And thus the Democrats show their acquiescence in the amendments to the Magna Charta of our Republic. If there is any one thing fit to utterly condemn the so-called Liberal Republican movement it certainly is this contest over the adoption or rejection of the proposed Constitution for West Virginia, which by that disqualifying clause, stands in direct antagonism to the Constitution of the United States, and which when adopted by the people of West Virginia, will be hailed as a Liberal Democratic Greeley triumph. Were the political activity of Carl Schurz of a principled character, he would have been found on the stump in West Virginia, protesting against the adoption of such a shameful instrument in thunder tones.

We do not doubt that even the poor colored people of West Virginia would have raised $1,500 to pay a speaker to denounce the patriot Schurz for his efforts in their behalf on this, to them, so vital question. But to do this would be to expose upon Carl Schurz the necessity of breaking the contract into which he entered with the evil one, and it is too late for him to do that, for he has executed and delivered that contract.

Shakespeare's purpose, "he cannot call his soul his own," rests upon him, and no human power on earth can deliver him from it.

The proof of loyalty to the cardinal doctrine of "equal rights for all" that the Republican State Convention has given to the colored citizens of our State it has also furnished to the German-born elements of our population by selecting Emil Sauer for the place of elector at large.

It is no new feature in the politics of our State that German-born Americans are chosen to the highest positions of honor and trust in our gift. And although the number and strength of the German-born Democratic voters of our State are the occasion for many a boast on the part of that party it was nevertheless always the Republican Party that fully recognized the political equality of the German-born American element. The Democratic Party of our State has never yet recognized its German-born component part—than by an occasional nomination for the inferior office of a State Prison Inspector.

And in view of such loud facts the inevitable conclusion of all farsounded citizens will be that the charge of sectionalism, nativism, and know-nothingism preferred against the Republican Party by the enemy is utterly base and false.

The Numancia—Soundings—Taken Around Her—The Depth of Water.

Capt. Van Ness, Prof. Mitchell's assistant, having taken soundings at and around the Numancia's anchorage in the Lower Bay, has prepared a report of the result, which will be submitted to the Pilot Commissioners at their weekly meeting today. The surveyor reports that the vessel swings with sixty fathoms of cable, which would allow her to move with the tide in a space of about thirty-seven acres. On sounding this space the lowest depth found was twenty-nine feet, while in the immediate vicinity of the Numancia, as she lay at the time, the lead sank thirty-seven and a half feet, and it is the opinion of the surveyor that at low tide the vessel would not float in the shallower localities. The incoming sea, which sweeps over the bar, of itself causes a "hir" of at least six inches, and a consequent fall of probably double that amount, and the Numancia, drawing, as is claimed, twenty-eight feet two inches, could be safe only in a locality where the shallowest depth would be twenty-nine and a half feet, allowing the sea to be comparatively calm during all the time, and ruffled only by the swell from over the bar. It is asserted that since her removal to the Lower Bay the frigate has twisted her cable and dragged the anchor, but at the time the soundings were taken she still remained in the locality originally suggested by the Pilot Commissioners.

A COLORED MAN TO SUMNER.

What Mr. Sumner, of the Senator's Service—His Reasons for Not Following It—Why the Colored Men Will Support Grant.

The following letter has been written to Senator Sumner by an intelligent colored working man of this City. It contains some commonsense arguments worthy of attention:

To Hon. Charles Sumner:

SIR: I am not one of those who, on the 4th of July last, had the honor of asking your guidance of "the action of the colored voters of the nation in the Presidential contest now pending." Your reply, however, I consider addressed to me as well as to your correspondents, for I also am a colored man; I may, indeed, consider it addressed particularly to me, for I have been a slave.

Allow me to give my reasons in brief for not accepting your guidance. You intimate toward the close of your letter that the time will come when colored people ought to think for themselves. With the profoundest deference to your wisdom, I propose to do that now. If the colored people have not intelligence enough to form an opinion upon public questions, they have not intelligence enough to vote. If your enemies and mine, Sir, shall point to your letter as an evidence of your belief that my people cannot be left to their own discretion, it is the more proper that some of us should promptly and publicly protest against that assumption.

I am, in common with every colored man I know, a Republican. We believe, as Frederick Douglass has said, that "the Republican Party is the deck; all the rest is the sea." We do not propose to go overboard. We have seen the drifting astern of civilization, hanging on by a rope, for several generations, and have had enough of it. Taken on board among our fellow-men, and recognized as fellow-creatures, we like it best to stay there. If we were to take to the sea once more we might, as you think, come up dryer next time. But to us the risk of drowning, or of never having a dry foothold again, seems the greater, and we prefer to stay where we are. In the depth of your wisdom this will seem like very shallow reasoning. But you must remember that we are a very simple people. Instinct goes a great way with us. Between those who succeeded at length in pulling us out of the sea and those who were always thrusting us deeper down into it, we think we know which are our friends. We shall stick to the first, whatever you may think of it.

You know what I mean by this. Less than ten years ago, 4,000,000 of us were slaves. Today every one of those 4,000,000 are free; every one of them has the right to life, to liberty, to property; every man among us has the right to vote. We owe this, under God, to the Republican Party. Had we been left to the mercy of the Democratic Party, we should have been 4,000,000 of slaves still, without any rights whatever. In that long struggle in our behalf, we remember that we saw you always in the fore-front of the battle. We saw you, with heavy hearts, struck down in our cause by a slaveholder's bludgeon. Now we see you, and we see you with many tears, beckon us to go with you from the ranks of our friends to the ranks of your and our enemies. We cannot follow you.

We shall vote for Gen. Grant, because Gen. Grant is the representative of the Republican Party, and if he shall be reelected President the Republican Party will remain in power. All we have we owe to them. They have raised us from slavery to freedom, and we have no reason to doubt that they will, in the future, uphold all they have done in the past. Our masters waged a long and bloody war that the Union might be dissolved and our enslavement made perpetual, and in all the North they had no allies except among Democrats. The Republicans saved the Union, and they saved us. We can trust and love those who have done this for us. We cannot trust and do not love those who, if they could have had their way, would still have held us as slaves.

You and other wise men say that some of the acts of the Republican Party since the war have not been wise. It may be so. No party was ever uniformly and always wise; but we do not see that the general welfare and prosperity of the people have suffered much from the acts of that party. And we do know that every act of the Republican Party that was done with special reference to the colored people was for our welfare and protection. They have amended the Constitution for our benefit; they have given to us the means of education; they have enacted laws to secure to us the rights and privileges they have bestowed upon us; and if they have made any mistakes in legislation in regard to us—and we do not know of them—they have been errors of judgment and not of intention. And we also know that every one of those Republican acts on our behalf—the abolition of slavery, the Constitutional amendments, the laws for our benefit and for our protection, have every one of them been opposed by Democrats, and if the Democrats could have had their way, would never have been passed. Shall we not trust such friends and mistrust such enemies?

If sixteen years ago Mr. Grant voted for the Democratic candidate for the Presidency, we forgive him that one error, but shall not follow his example. We forgive him because since then he has been Gen. Grant, and achieved the most splendid and decisive victories and the final triumph of that war which gave us our freedom, and because he has been the chosen President of the party that secured to us the fruits of that freedom. If, while President, he has given office to several of his relatives—a mistake not committed lately, and not likely to be repeated—can you forgive him for saying that I count such an error as infinitely small when weighed against his services to the Republic and to my race? The nepotism which assumes such formidable dimensions in your eyes seems in ours a small blemish when we remember the cruel despotism from which this man was the chosen instrument to deliver us. Democratic rule is the thing that has the most terrors for us.

Perhaps it could not reduce us again to slavery. Even if it did not, we have not forgotten the New-York riots of 1863, when Democrats shot us down in the streets of this City; hanged our people to lamp-posts, burned down our houses over the heads of our wives and children, and wreaked their hatred of us upon the dead bodies of their victims with the most savage atrocities. We hesitate to shake hands over such "bloody chasms" with our persecutors of yesterday, though Gen. Grant should have given twice twelve offices to his relatives! No, Sir! You do injustice to our memory of our wrongs, and our sense of gratitude for benefits received, if you think you can so easily persuade us to turn our backs upon our friends.

I should have more confidence in the sincerity of your motives if the forgiveness of injury you inculcate were universal. But while you ask us to trust those who have done us so much positive harm, you bid us in the same breath to be unforgiving of a wrong which you say Gen. Grant proposed to perpetrate upon some of our race in another country, and, therefore, to trust him no longer. Must we accept this as the unpassioned and candid judgment of a statesman? Is there not room for a doubt that Gen. Grant, in proposing to annex Dominica, meant to benefit the Dominican black man rather than to harm the black man of Hayti? But whatever his motive was, he abandoned the project when he found that it did not commend itself to the judgment of his countrymen. Shall we quarrel with him because he repented? Even if he meant wrong, the fact that he did not commit it should, it seems to me, commend him the more to our confidence. I will take your word for it that he crowned that Presidential iniquity by not inviting Mr. Frederick Douglass to dinner; but as the admission of colored men to social attentions of that sort has not yet become quite universal, perhaps we may leave it a little while longer out of the list of qualifications for the Presidency.

If we cannot cease to believe in Gen. Grant at your bidding, still less can we begin to believe in Mr. Greeley. Had our faith in him been ever so strong before, it could not have survived the treachery and folly which led him, apparently to gratify an insane desire for office, to put himself into the hands of your friends, or rather of those who have proved our most bitter opponents. Did he then even so much for our sake, how could we trust him to do any thing when he cannot even be true to himself? But for his friendship to us he cannot take even your word. You constrain me to doubt either your truthfulness or your judgment or your memory, when you assert of Mr. Greeley that he was an abolitionist. I do not think he ever claimed to make that claim for himself. In his acceptance of the Democratic nomination he is careful to state, in guarded terms, that his opposition to slavery was only to its extension. He never forgave the Abolitionists—that they defeated Henry Clay by casting their votes for an anti-slavery candidate. To the first political anti-slavery party, the Free-soilers, he was bitterly opposed, and the anti-slavery movement received no countenance from him till it became popular enough and powerful enough to form the Republican Party.

I am not unmindful of how important the formation of that party was to the progress of events; but the gratitude we owe to it is quite another thing from the gratitude that may be demanded from us to those who preceded it. In this last Mr. Greeley can have no share. In those darkeneys he was not our friend. He advised us then, if he condescended to think us worthy of any advice whatever, or as content with our position as bondsmen and bondwomen, and chiding us for our unreasonable impatience. Nor was he in the same spirit to be content with any position which white people should see fit to give us, and to seek for no equality and no rights in Church or in State when the white folks disagreed.

We are not unmindful of how much we owe to him and his paper for their earnest opposition to the extension of slavery, but when you bid us in the same breath to expect us to be accurate in the measurement of his services to our race. We know as well as you do, Sir, how much the war has done for us, and we cannot forget that, had Mr. Greeley had his way, there would now be an independent Southern republic, holding our ancestors in perpetual servitude. We cannot forget that, at any time during those four years of war, Mr. Greeley was ready and anxious for a peace, however ignominious, with our Southern masters, though not a shackle should be struck from the limbs of the black man. We cannot forget that after Mr. Lincoln had decreed emancipation, Mr. Greeley proposed to compensate the slaveholders by paying them four hundred millions of dollars as the market price of our bodies. These facts are known of all men, and yet in the face of them you call him an Abolitionist, and bid us be grateful to him as our friend. In the face of them, you bid us to give him our votes for the Presidency, and turn away from the man who said, as long ago as August, 1863: "It became patent to my mind early in the rebellion that the North and South could never live in peace with each other except as one nation, and that without slavery. I would not, therefore, be willing to see any settlement until this question is forever settled."

Mr. Greeley was willing that the Union should be dissolved, and to leave us to our fate. He was willing to purchase peace, though we should remain in slavery. When slavery was past salvation, he was willing to reconcile slaveholders to its loss by the payment of four hundred millions of dollars. Gen. Grant, on the contrary, meant to have the Union, and have it without slavery; he would consent to no peace till that question was settled forever, and he "fought it out on that line" for several Summers! Yet, you ask us to accept one of these men as our friend and believe the other our enemy! Is thy servant a dog that he should do this thing?

I will not canvass Mr. Greeley's personal character. He is said by those who ought to know him to be a vain and eccentric man; fickle and untrustworthy; feeble of purpose; moved by motives which nobody can fathom; seeking his ends with a cunning that knows no scruple, and choosing for his most intimate companions and friends men who have won notoriety as politicians through devious ways, of whose reputations, if not otherwise questionable. Whether all this be true or not, it is enough for me that he, who all his life has been opposed to the Democrats, has become the Democratic candidate. In so doing he seems to me to be fickle of purpose, and untrustworthy in principle; governed by motives which I do not pretend to understand, and no longer worthy of confidence as the friend of my race. Gen. Grant, on the contrary, has shown himself by four years of war and four years of peace to be true by his country, true to the rights of his people and true to the best instincts of his own heart. My vote, and I hope that of every colored man in the United States, will be given to Grant.

I am, Sir, with great respect, your grateful, though not obedient servant,

JAMES F. THOMAS.

ARREARS OF PAY.

A number of motions were heard yesterday, before Judge Barrett, in Supreme Court, Chambers, in relation to claims against the City for pay, some of which were applications for writs of mandamus to compel payment of the amount claimed, and others applications on behalf of the City, to open judgments taken by default. The first case argued was that of Officer Smith, taken as a test case to determine the right of officers of the Court of Over and Terminer to pay, and to whom $321 was claimed to be due. When this case was called, Mr. O'Gorman, Corporation Counsel, asked for a few days' delay, representing to the Court that he had received from the Controller's Department a letter to the effect that the applicants had not performed the services for which they claimed pay, but that such services had been performed by officers of the Supreme Court.

Mr. Charles W. Brooks, who appeared for the claimants, contended that these motions had been delayed from time to time at the request of counsel representing the City; that there was no merit in the defense to the claims; that the claims having been referred to the Board of Audit, Counsel to the Corporation was asked for his opinion as to their legality, and in response rendered a favorable one; that the Judges of the Supreme Court having revised their stenographers, had exercised the power conferred by law, after consent of the Judges, and appointed the present claimants. Upon this state of facts, holding as he did affidavits that the services had been faithfully performed, he thought no further delay should be granted.

Counsel for the City asked an adjournment, saying that long delay had already taken place, and there appeared no just reason for extending it.

Mr. Brooks then read the affidavits of service, after which Mr. O'Gorman said in view of the affidavits just read as to service, and in view of the fact that he was already committed to the legality of the claims by an opinion rendered by the Board of Audit, he did not feel at liberty to make any further argument in opposition to the motion.

Judge Barrett thought it was clearly his duty to order a writ of mandamus, and so decided.

It was intimated in the argument that where the claims were before the Board of Audit the President of the Commissioners of Central Park voted to allow them, the remaining two voting against their allowance.

The next case was a motion on behalf of the City to open a judgment for nine months' salary, amounting to $7,500, entered by Judge Quinn, of the District Court, (Civil.) The motion was made by Corporation Counsel O'Gorman, on the ground that the judgment had been entered without notice to the City, and without the intervention of a jury, as required by statute.

Judge Quinn, in arguing the motion on his own behalf, stated that he had not only allowed the twenty days called for by statute, within which to put in an answer, to expire, but had extended the time some six or ten days before entering judgment, without any defense being put in. Now, he continued, this application was made without even an affidavit of merits being filed; and in the absence of such affidavit or an answer, there was no question of fact to be presented to a jury. Moreover, the Court of Appeals had rendered a decision, the effect of which was to declare the statute relating to judgments along by jury unconstitutional, such provision having been inserted in what is known as the Tax Levy bill, the caption of which did not refer thereto. Notwithstanding this, he was willing the judgment should be opened, provided the majority of law, which was the only assistance the case, should be submitted to the Court on a motion for a mandamus.

Judge Barrett decided that an order be granted opening the default on condition that the matter be heard before the Court as a question of law on a motion for a mandamus by plaintiff. It will be remembered in this case that payment was refused on the ground that the Supervisors were without authority to raise the Judge's pay from $5,000 to $10,000.

The case of the clerks in the office of the Corporation Attorney, already mentioned in the TIMES, was also up, and decision reserved.

The State Assessment.

The Special Committee of the Board of Supervisors appointed to obtain for Kings County an equitable apportionment of the State tax, met yesterday afternoon, to decide upon the amount of reduction in the assessment they should urge upon the Board of Equalization at Albany. Of nineteen counties it was stated the average rate of taxation was less than 24 per cent. In Brooklyn it is 56 4-10 per cent. of the valuation. The increase percentage in Kings County in ten years past is 96 9-10; in New-York, 98. A memorial to the State Board was read, stating that the only object of the Committee was to obtain a just and equitable assessment on the valuation of real estate. Kings County is taxed twice as high as any other County in the State except New-York, and if the State Board fails to afford relief redress will be sought in the Courts. The Committee will visit Albany either today or to-morrow.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

The City of Nowhere.

In your issue of this morning there appears an editorial in relation to the Manufacturers' Exhibition at Newark, N. J., which, while it does full justice to the industries of that city, may lead some to form an erroneous impression as to its manufacturing, commercial and residence importance and the progressiveness of its inhabitants.

In the editorial referred to, you state that until quite recently it has been without any "decent hotel," that most of the streets are paved with the old-fashioned cobble-stone pavement, dangerous for old people to travel over at a rapid rate, and that "it has always been backward in stimulating enterprises that have made so many of the towns and cities of England and France celebrated the world over."

As to the long-felt need of a good hotel, which, until recently, the city has been without, the reason that every attempt to establish one has been unsuccessful is easily understood. It must be remembered that Newark is but nine miles from New-York, with almost constant communication by rail. Parties going there as business from this City could not be expected to remain over night when they could reach home in thirty minutes every half hour from early morning till midnight. The same reasons would prevent those that go to Newark from a distance, remaining there at night, when all the hotels, amusements and attractions of the great Metropolis were but thirty minutes away, about the same distance in time that Madison-square is from the lower business portion of New-York. The proximity of the Astor House, St. Nicholas, Metropolitan, and other leading hotels of this City, is the reason why every effort on the part of Newark, until now, to establish a first-class house, has proved a failure.

It is this nearness to New-York that renders the fact of the existence of such a city as Newark most remarkable; that immediately along side of the Metropolis of America, with its million of inhabitants, immense wealth and absorption of capital, and a business the ramifications of which extend to every corner of the globe, there should have grown up, as it were in a few years, a great corporation, that is entirely self-supporting in nearly all of its interests, and ranks as the third manufacturing city of the Union, makes Newark one of the wonders of the nineteenth century. There is not in this country, and we believe not in all Europe, another instance of two great cities having their rise in such close proximity to each other. In saying this, of course, we consider Brooklyn and Jersey City as being but adjuncts or portions of the City of New-York.

In a Newark paper of March 19, 1811, the population of the town meeting, based upon census returns, is stated as 4,000. In 1870 the same authority gives the number of inhabitants as 108,542; and the present estimate is 125,000. Here, then, we have an average increase in population for the past sixty years of nearly eighty per cent. for each decade, a growth that is certainly unparalleled, for the same length of time, the world over.

Newark's wonderful increase has not, by any means, been confined to the extension of her borders and the augmentation of her people. In religious and educational advantages, wealth and finance, trade and manufacture, art and science, and in all the outward signs and internal necessities of prosperity, she is in every respect a great city. Her ninety church organizations have costly edifices, many of them, in point of beauty and architectural design, superior to most of those of the City of New-York. Her Library Association contains a collection of over 15,000 volumes, and the State Historical Society, that is located in her borders, has some 16,000 more, besides manuscripts of great value and variety, and a cabinet of curiosities and relics. Her citizens have a choice of eight different daily papers from which to learn the news, which, in comparison to the population, is twice the number that New-York City boasts of. Her fifteen banking and savings institutions have a capital, surplus and savings, of nearly twenty-six millions of dollars, and the three life insurance companies have assets amounting to nearly twenty-four millions of dollars; the most of these institutions occupying buildings that would be a credit to a city ten times the size of Newark.

The thrift and enterprise of her people is proverbial, and since the year 1865 the trade and manufactures of the place have so increased until within the past year, in 297 different classes of industries there have been employed 29,147 hands, with an invested capital of $34,407,670; the combined efforts of capital and labor having produced merchandise to the amount of $72,370,066. With such a record for the past year, it is possible that Newark "has always been backward in stimulating enterprises, that have made so many of the towns and cities of England and France celebrated," as stated in your editorial? Where in the British Islands, or on the Continent, can be found a city so young in years of actual growth that has developed so many industries? Instead of such enterprises as the City of Newark, instead of being backward in stimulating enterprise, her citizens have been always most active in developing the resources of the city, and in inducing foreign capital and labor to make Newark the seat of their trade and productions. To further this, it has had for several years an efficient Board of Trade, which has on its roll of membership all of the leading merchants and manufacturers of the city; its prominent committee is for the purpose of the introduction of manufactures and new business, and it is doing a most important work in advancing the interests of trade and manufacture.

The new quarters of this Board, compiled by the Secretary, Mr. Robert S. Swords, is filled with most valuable information, and from it we glean many of the facts contained in this communication.

As to your old-fashioned cobble-stone, which your editorial tells us is the principal pavement of the City, upon inspection it would be found that her thoroughfares will compare favorably with the average streets of New-York. Few cities are more distinguished by beauty of situation. Built upon an elevated plain, with the river back in the valley, and spreading over the swelling hills to the North and West, it is a prominent object to the traveler from New-York, immediately after passing the Palisade Ridge; an adequate conception of its attractions can be obtained only by entering Broad-street at its north end, and passing through its length, passing its imposing and beautiful church edifices, its massive and costly banking and insurance buildings, its parks, shaded by rows of grand contemplative elms, and surrounded by the elegant and luxurious dwellings of its aristocratic population. His magnificent avenue, Broad, which stretches from beyond the Morris and Essex Railroad, some three miles southward, where it intersects with the main avenues, extending to the centre of the City of Elizabeth, gives the visitor an idea of the taste and enterprise of the founders of the city, qualities which have descended to their descendants, and are visible in its wide and rapid extension.

Relief for the Poor.

In your issue of today I notice a communication headed "A Lesson of the Picnics," in which the writer urges the establishment, in this country, of a form of charity which, he says, has been most efficacious for good in England, where it has been for years practically tested. He further states that no such work has as yet been undertaken in this country. I hasten to inform the writer, as well as the public generally, that such a work is now, and has for the past year and a half, been maintained in this City, through the exertions of a few individuals who were, like your correspondent, impressed with the great good such an undertaking might accomplish among the suffering ones of this Metropolis. To this end "The Physical Nourishment Society" was organized, with a location at No. 228 West Fifty-first-street, where, through a competent corps of visitors, it has been dispensing the necessaries of life to the sick and suffering within its field of operation, which has been much circumscribed, owing to lack of means to enlarge its sphere of usefulness. The results of the work have been wonderful, and I submit a little résumé of the plan of the Society's operation, in the hope that among your large circle of readers some may be found to interest themselves in our work, and lend us a helping hand.

The Society strives for the improvement of the physical condition of the destitute, and to this end provides the necessaries of life, more especially nutritious food for the sick and suffering. The work of the Society is confined to that part of the City west of Seventh-avenue, between Fortieth and Seventy-fifth streets. No person is admitted to the enjoyment of any of the benefits of the Society until the fact of their destitution and worthiness is fully established by the strictest investigation. All worthy persons are assisted without regard to race, color or creed. The rooms from which the food is distributed are under the management of Miss Sarah Warren, who, from a life-long experience as Bible-reader in the field of her present labors, is eminently fitted for the discharge of the duties which devolve upon her. The Society pays no salaries; all the work of the managers is entirely gratuitous, and the only expense incurred is the rent of rooms occupied, viz., $300 per annum. Thus every dollar contributed goes directly for the relief of the suffering. It would hardly receive credence among your readers should I tell them how much for good we have accomplished with a very little money. Still, I venture upon their credulity as a specimen—what was done with 50th. In the week spent with following result:

> 3,400 quarts of soup distributed.
> 1,500 dinners served in the house.
> 500 dinners sent out.

In addition to which the sick and dying were furnished nourishing food and delicacies, such as beef-tea, beefsteak, jellies, corn-starch, &c.

Number of persons assisted, 9,800.

Number of families, 400.

All this accomplished with less than $600! Where can the invest

The business over the Lake Shore Road in August is unprecedented in amount. In the third week of the month the earnings were $267,000, comparing with $277,000 the same week last year. The decrease for the current year will, from present appearances, exceed two million of dollars.

The North British and Mercantile Insurance Company, of London and Edinburgh, have declared a Dividend of Ten ¢ cent. out of its earnings for the six months ending July 1, 1872.

MONDAY, Aug. 26—5 P. M.

A failure among the Brokers on the Bull account, in the Gold Room, announced this forenoon, caused the sales of Gold to run down to 112½ ¢ cent., from which point there was a subsequent recovery to 112⅞@112½ ¢ cent. The later sales denoted more steadiness in the market, at about the closing figure of Saturday Afternoon. The extent of the failure referred to is said to involve differences to the amount of about $80,000, the principal creditors being among the immediate friends of the Broker in default. The decline in Gold on Saturday and today has somewhat stiffened the rates of Exchange on London, and 109@109½ ¢ cent. for sixty days is quoted today, as against 108@108½ ¢ cent. at the close of last week.

Since the foregoing paragraph was written we have a report on the Street that the unfortunate Broker has left town, supposed with $20,000 in cash. But, whether this report be true or false, the probability is that the whole amount of his differences will not exceed the sum of $80,000, as at first stated. His connections are of the first respectability.

The rates for Money among the Brokers today are 4@6 ¢ cent. The supply offered on temporary loan is still very liberal, and the calculation upon high rates of Interest is not likely to be realized for some weeks to come.

Late in the day the Exchange on London, 60 days, is called not over 109 ¢ cent. net, and the market less firm than reported at the opening of business this morning.

Stocks are looking firm at the Exchange Board, and there seems a pretty strong demand for Erie and Central and most of the Western Roads and also for Pacific Mail and Western Telegraph. The theory that dearer money and enhanced business with the South and West from the new crops, implying, of course, larger traffic on the Railroads later in the season, will improve speculation in the Stock Exchange, is evidently gaining ground, and report says that some of the recent heavy Bulls in the Gold Room who have abandoned speculation in that quarter because of the flattering look of the Fall Trade and the prospects of the Presidential Election, are making ready so take hold of Stocks for a decided upward turn in prices.

The extraordinary receipts of the New-York Central and Hudson River Roads for the railroad year ending 30th September, proximo, which it is said will exceed Twenty-six millions of dollars, have given rise to a rumor that the October Half-yearly Dividend of the Company will be raised to Five ¢ cent. We doubt the correctness of this mere inference from the heavy receipts of the year, but that the value of the property, by permanent improvements, out of these receipts, will be greatly enhanced after paying the customary dividends of Four ¢ cent. Half-yearly, we have no doubt. Such receipts are unprecedented in the history of the American railroad system. They exceed, in a single year, the whole capital of the New-York Central, when the road was consolidated in 1853 by three millions of dollars. The receipts of the road that year were scuttlered great at $5,400,000!

The turn of the Stock market near the close of dealings in the Exchange Hall, this afternoon, was to increased firmness, and a general demand and advance in most of the New-York and Western Roads, and also in Pacific Mail and Telegraph. At the very close the following quotations were made as compared with Saturday afternoon. The Public Funds were weak on the decline in Gold. Gold was partially better later in the day, sales, 112⅞@112½ ¢ cent.

BANKING AND FINANCIAL.

A STRONG SECURITY

We recommend the Bonds of the JACKSONVILLE, NORTH-WESTERN AND SOUTH-EASTERN RAILWAY, running from Jacksonville, Ill., to Mount Vernon, a distance of 175 miles, as ABSOLUTELY SAFE on the following grounds:

1. Because they are the FIRST MORTGAGE on a railroad running through a thickly populated section of country, rich in agriculture and minerals. The Counties of Morgan, Scoupin, Montgomery, Bond, Clinton, Marion and Jefferson, all of which are intersected by the road, are all remarkable for their marvellous productiveness, some of them raising wheat which commands a higher price in the market, than that produced in any other locality. As Virginia, where the deposits of bituminous coal are seven feet in depth, a large business will be created so soon as cheap transportation is assured by the construction of this road to accessible markets.

2. Because the need of additional railroad facilities in that quarter, for the purposes of travel and for the transportation of minerals and the surplus crops, has been so strongly felt, that the municipalities and prominent inhabitants have subscribed the money wherewithal, thirty miles of the road has been already completed, and is now in operation, and material for the track and arrangements made for the laying of twenty additional miles of track in time to move the Autumn crops.

3. Because the following great railroads act as feeders to the road, viz.: The Toledo, Wabash and Western Railroad; the Peoria, Pekin and Jacksonville Railroad; the Chicago and Alton Railroad; the Indianapolis and St. Louis Railroad; the Terre Haute Railroad; the Vandalia and St. Louis Railroad; and the Illinois Central Railroad. Moreover, the road forms a part of a through route from St. Louis to the sea-board.

4. Because it is a well-ascertained fact that the bulk of the earnings of Western roads arise from local traffic, and one-tenth only from through traffic. The great State lines of Illinois are probably the strongest corporations in the country, and, after completion, this road will unquestionably take its place among them.

By investing in these bonds, holders of Government and other high-priced securities will still hold an unquestionable security, while adding largely to their income.

Price 85 and accrued interest in currency. Pamphlets on application.

The Democratic papers are compelled to admit that things do not look well for the Philosopher. The personal organ of the "Doctor" calls upon its followers to organize, and decides that if they do not stop beating the gong, and go to work to get votes, they will be beaten themselves. The Herald—that queer political weather-cock—has for two days in succession declared that the current is setting in favor of Grant, while the World devotes over a long-winded column to an exposition of the causes why "the Democratic-Liberal canvass has seemed to move rather heavily, for the last two or three weeks." It omits to mention, as one of the causes, the numerous reasons it urged against Mr. GREELEY's nomination, probably because it forgets that every one cannot change position as often as the editor of that journal. We venture to suggest to the Tribune, Herald and World that the true reason of the change they perceive is that noise and lying cannot long deceive the American people, and that reflection and discussion are bringing out clearly the issues involved. The people see that GREELEY's supporters are influenced chiefly by hope and hate—hope of the offices they want, and hate for those who have not bestowed offices as the haters desired.

The result of the election in West Virginia was another blow to the Greeley faction, although, in making a note of it, the "Philosopher's" papers pretend that it was of no consequence. The system of philosophy invented by Mr. Toots is extensively practiced just now in the school of the Sage. The Republicans did not, indeed, put a straight ticket in the field, but there was a Greeley-Democratic candidate in the field, and he was badly beaten. Had he been elected, the public would have heard a great deal about the "turning of the tide," and the wonderful progress which was being made in the path of reform, as understood by Tammany. Everywhere defeat follows in the footsteps of the disgraceful coalition. Their frauds in North Carolina did not save them—and they could not even carry their candidate in West Virginia. What sort of a chance do they stand in Vermont and Maine? Every man who goes for GREELEY in either State might as well cast it for ANDREW JACKSON at once.

Tennessee seems admirably adapted for almost any political purpose except that of voting the Republican tickets. Letters from persons who did not expect to serve any party purpose in writing them afford evidence of frauds in many of the counties, but especially in Williamson, Giles and Marshall, by which negroes who supposed they were voting for a Unionist for Circuit Judge were made to vote for his Democratic competitor, by the simple process of having their tickets taken away and others substituted. The Democrats there having had practice at this sort of thing, ought to be able to give Mr. GREELEY a handsome majority in November. TWEED would undoubtedly have tried something in the same line in New-York, if his patent voting-machine were not out of repair, notwithstanding the efforts of the "Reformed Democracy" to keep it in working order.

The organ of the Sleeping Sage attacks Mr. HENRY CLEWS because he expressed the opinion that Mr. MURPHY was "the best Collector we have had for the past twelve years," and in the same article praises Mr. A. T. STEWART, apparently ignorant of the fact that the latter gentleman had under oath volunteered the statement: "I must say that, so far as my experience has been, Mr. MURPHY conducted the business as well as any one else that has recently been in the place."

If there is one party more utterly extinct than another in this country, it is that of the "Know-nothings." Nevertheless, Mr. GREELEY's paper labors to prove, not only that Senator WILSON was a Know-nothing, but is one now, and if elected Vice-President—or, as it says, "President"—would be bound to oppose the appointment of naturalized citizens to office. It would be degrading to the human mind to have to rebut such arguments as these, and that they should be seriously urged by Mr. GREELEY's spokesmen, only affords another proof of the supernatural stupidity of the men into whose hands he has intrusted his precious cause.

Mr. VANDERBILT has not yet been able to do anything for the inhabitants of the district above Forty-second-street in reference to the hideous noises which his engine-drivers create throughout the night. The whistling, bell-ringing and blowing-off of steam are a greater nuisance than ever, and it is impossible to believe that they are absolutely essential to the management of traffic on that road. Thousands of our fellow-citizens are kept awake half the night by this unearthly din. Once more we appeal to Mr. VANDERBILT to have some pity on people who live in this district, and not act as if he were determined to depopulate it.

Senator TRUMBULL might have excited rather more attention than he was able to do in Portland, Me., yesterday, had he made some attempt to answer the ugly charges against his integrity which were made in the TIMES of July 6, and which remain to this day unanswered. People would have listened with much greater interest to some explanations about the corrupt and unconstitutional manner of his election to the United States Senate, about his insatiable appetite for office for himself and his friends, and about the very fat retainer which he held in the McCardle case, than they did to his rehash of stale slanders, and his quota of fresh insinuations and reckless misstatements.

The Vermont Election.

It is admitted that there is no doubt concerning the result of the election in Vermont, on Tuesday next. The only question is what will be the Republican majority? Ever since the protracted struggle against slavery and its consequent evils began, the Green Mountain State has always been arrayed as steadily and surely as Massachusetts upon the side of freedom. From the rugged hills and busy valleys of that narrow strip of the North there has never come an uncertain sound, and there is no reason to doubt that the State will speak as clearly and unmistakably as ever on Tuesday next.

But it must be remembered that it has been customary for the Republican majority in Vermont to fluctuate greatly. Going as far back as 1856, we find a majority of 28,647 for FREMONT, but in 1860 LINCOLN had only 22,074. In 1864, when the nation was in the third year of the civil war, and the Democracy had declared at Chicago that it was a failure, the majority for LINCOLN was 20,098; and in 1868 the attempted surrender to the baffled rebellion through SEYMOUR was rebuked by a majority for Gen. GRANT of 31,802. Vermont in this vote excelled all previous efforts, and has never done as well since. With the defeat of 1868 the Democratic Party in the State was virtually wiped out of existence, and there has been a large falling off in the aggregate of Republican majorities. In 1869 we had only 20,379, and in 1870, 21,309.

These figures should be carefully kept in mind. They become suggestive when we consider the possibilities of Tuesday next. It is admitted that both the State tickets are excellent, and that there are no complications of a local character to affect the vote. We might, therefore, reasonably expect an average Republican majority, and yet it may fall a little below the standard without affording any indication that there has been a Republican defection to Greeleyism. Although the correspondents say that a great deal of work is being done by both parties, we have seen no evidence that a searching or vigorous canvass, like that in Maine, is being carried on. The Republicans of Vermont have been fighting the shadow of a political party, so far as they are locally concerned, for so many years that they cannot be blamed if they tire of the sport. The votes since 1868 show that they have tired, and we shall not be surprised, nor find in the fact any evidence of the "ground swell" of which we have heard so much, if the vote of Tuesday shall confirm this idea. If the Republican majority should go down to 15,000, which is not likely to be the case, it would only be evidence that the Republicans of Vermont do not see so clearly as their brethren in North Carolina that the serpent of Democracy has been "scotched," but not killed.

We trust, however, that our friends of the Green Mountains will bestir themselves to bring out the full vote of the party. There is no doubt whatever that if every vote which honestly belongs to us is polled, our majority will be over rather than under twenty thousand. It is a duty the Republicans of Vermont owe the nation they have served so well in the past to lead the vanguard of freedom once more in such force as to encourage their brethren all over the land. Their local affairs may not have sufficient interest to attract them to the polls, and they may believe that having locally buried Democracy beyond the hope of resurrection, there is no occasion for further effort on their part. We hope they will not allow themselves to be led astray by these considerations, but will tax all their strength to poll their full vote. By so doing they will hasten the disintegration of that coalition which has disgusted the world. Let Vermont encourage Republicans all over the Union, and her good work will be held in grateful recollection.

Senator Trumbull as a Democrat.

There seems to be something in the atmosphere of Maine that compels the pilgrims from Illinois, who are just now attempting to enlighten the people of the Pine Tree State as to their political duty, to act absurdly. Senator TRUMBULL the other night was at Biddeford, as he said, "to reason with the people in regard to public affairs;" but he would have been nearer the mark if he had said he was there to talk about public affairs, for there was very little reason in his speech, as we find it reported in his Democratic organ.

Senator TRUMBULL, it appears, has been terribly oppressed, and wishes to be "emancipated from a despotism as intolerable as any this country has ever known," and he explains that by this fine phrase he means party despotism. The Republican Party has become false to its purposes, and therefore he has joined hands with FENTON and TWEED to secure financial and civil service reform, and with the Southern Democracy to establish the rights of man on an enduring basis. In his view, the known profligate who has promised to reform is more trustworthy than he who never went astray; and the party which omitted no means to prevent the giving of civil rights to the negro should be more trusted to enforce them than the party which struggled so manfully to confer them. But Senator TRUMBULL is not altogether sure that the Republican Party has done anything for humanity. He denies the claim of the Philadelphia platform, and says that it was the people, not the Republican Party, who carried on the war against the rebellion and enfranchised the negroes. We are sorry the Senator is forced, in his apostacy, to copy the twaddle of Democrats, who are attempting to share in the glory of work they bitterly denounced while it was being carried on. But neither the Democrats nor Senator TRUMBULL can make the people forget that the war was waged, the country saved, and a race lifted out of bondage, through the agency of a party, and that the party which was thus used was the Republican Party. Nor can the people be made to forget that, during all these eventful years, the Democratic Party was in arms against the Government in the South, or giving aid and comfort by its official utterances in the North to the enemies of the Government.

But the Senator from Illinois shows most conclusively that he has been thoroughly converted to Democracy in this extract:

"There are no rebels. The rebellion received its death-blow on the battle-field more than seven years ago. As we have expunged the word 'slave' from our midst, so let us expunge the word 'rebel.' But even allowing that he is supported by rebels, recall, if you please, the time when your Convention met in Philadelphia. You looked around for some one to preside over it, and whom did you select? An old rebel, a man by the name of SETTLE. But when Gen. GRANT wanted an Attorney-General a while ago, whom did he select? He went to Georgia and appointed Mr. AKERMAN, a man who had served all through the war on the staff of that arch-traitor, ROBERT TOOMBS."

These are no rebels, says the Senator, but if they are, then they are such men as Judge SETTLE and Mr. AKERMAN. This is another familiar argument of Democracy. They can see little difference between the man who, having been arrayed in arms against the Government, admits he was beaten, and logically labors for the pacification of the country upon the basis of the amended Constitution, and the man who, also having been in arms, rejects the amendments and, overthrown on the battle-field, has recourse to every possible means of political and social action to prevent pacification, with equality before the law for all men. The Senator is disposed to put the Ku-klux, which murders and scourges for opinion sake, a little higher in the public estimation, than such men as SETTLE, who admit they were rebels, and, from the close of the war until now, have labored honestly and heartily in support of that policy of reconstruction which the Republican Party adopted and has sought to carry out.

The majority of the people will hardly agree with Senator TRUMBULL. They know that to the Republican Party is due all that makes the nation great today. They cannot hope that it will be made greater by such men as GREELEY, FENTON, and SCHURZ. They know that the triumph of these men means the triumph of the Democracy. They know that with that party in possession of the Government, the amendments will be mere nullities, for want of enforcement by the legislative and executive departments, and that they must begin again and fight inch by inch the weary battle for human rights. Only the Republican Party has proved faithful and capable; only that party can be trusted in the future.

No Meat.

When BYRON dined with ROGERS, he munched crackers washed down with soda-water—and afterward quietly stole off to his club, and feasted sumptuously on beef-steaks and porter. A dish of chopped potatoes drenched with vinegar was a favorite affectation of his when seen of men; but, however often he

"* * Poured huge drafts of sorrow down,

the noble bard not unfrequently solaced himself on diet of a far more exhilarating character. In a word, BYRON sought to unite the credit of abstinence with the pleasures of indulgence, and even in eating his victuals, could not resist the temptation, with him so exceptionally powerful, to excite surprise.

Now, what BYRON did for the sake of effect, and his brother poet, SHELLEY, for the sake of conviction, what GRAHAM so vigorously preached and the Shakers so rigidly practice, there is serious danger that the greater part of mankind will soon be reduced to observe out of sheer necessity. The price of butchers' meat in England is rising with alarming rapidity. An advance of some twenty-five per cent. has taken place within a very short time, and the tendency is still upward. The English laboring classes have been sadly stinted in animal food for many generations; but, if matters go on as at present, we are assured they will ere long be forced to abstain altogether. It has been held by some that the scarcity which occasions the rise in meat has its origin in exceptional conditions; but the report just issued by the Veterinary Department of the Privy Council certainly fails to warrant such a view. Cattle-plague, dry weather, the foot and mouth disease, high wages, and pleuro-pneumonia, are the chief reasons assigned for the high prices. Yet, as regards wages, they have been increasing for generations, and so have numbers, and drouth is surely not peculiar to our own immediate time; while the rise in the price of meat has been remarkably sudden and spasmodic, and, in fact, has taken place within a very few years. As regards cattle plague, the report we speak of is authority for the statement that no case of the disease has occurred in England since September, 1867. The foot and mouth trouble has been a great bugbear; but the tables show that since the Animal Contagious Diseases Act passed in England, in 1869, of the whole number of animals attacked hardly more than one per cent. have died. Besides this, the importation of beasts has greatly augmented; since the 508 802 of all sorts, imported in 1869, had risen last year to 1,250,116. On the whole, the causes usually ascribed are insufficient to account for the effect in question; which must, we conceive, be attributed in a greater measure to a vastly-increased demand for animal food among all classes, and a coincident fall in the value of money.

The supply of dried meats brought from Australia does not seem in any appreciable degree to have checked the upward turn, and it may be worth while for our Texan graziers to consider whether the exigency cannot be made profitable to themselves. Swift steamers, running say from Galveston to Southampton, might, perhaps, even now be put in the cattle trade to advantage, and if the rise continues, there could be no doubt of the early success of such a speculation. For our own supply, the vast plains between the Rocky Mountains and the Pacific for some time will furnish a stock ample, no doubt, but still not more so than will be required to keep down that expansion in the price of this commodity which is almost as marked here as in England, but which the larger means of the bulk of our population renders less troublesome. Ultimately, however, the serious question now agitating England will, we suppose, present itself throughout the world, and What are we to do for meat? will be heard on the Hudson and Sacramento as well as on the Thames. Of course, there are the rats of the Chinese and the blubber of the Esquimaux, but there must be an end to the supply of even these delicacies, and the difficult problem of new substitutes will face mankind afresh. It is gratifying, under these prospective circumstances, to be able to suggest some rational palliatives. In the first place, it is well known that demand induces supply, and, just as more Havana cigars are smoked and more champagne drank than can possibly be produced in the regions whence they are presumed to come, so fresh droves of cattle may be hoped for to meet the critical emergency even in defiance of all laws of statistics and propagation. A more tangible consolation to scientific minds may, however, be found in the fact that if the prodigious heat of the current season, both in Europe and America, is to continue, the demand for oxygenated, as distinguished from carbonized, food must necessarily increase, and the meat market thus be relieved in a ratio indicated by the thermometer.

The Children's Fund.

We published yesterday a full statement of the accounts of the Children's Fund, showing the receipts and expenditures up to Saturday last. These figures were given as they appear on the Treasurer's books, and afford a full description of the amount of work performed and the good accomplished under the fund. The contributors will thus be enabled to see at a glance exactly how their money is being expended, and the benefits they have conferred upon the poor children of this City.

From these accounts it appears that the aggregate amount received for the fund up to and including Saturday was $18,900 28. Of this sum, there had been expended $10,289 17 to defray the expenses of fourteen excursions and the relief work in the four districts established under the fund. But it is not from these figures that any adequate idea can be gained of the labor performed by those engaged in carrying out the details of the movement. In the fourteen excursions comprised in this statement, 11,830 children participated, together with 1,647 adults, (parents and guardians.) The expenses were $7,771 64, making the individual cost for each person a fraction over fifty-six cents, a result largely due to the liberality of those who furnished railroad trains, barges, steamers, or supplies—a fact which shows the popularity of the fund, and the objects for which it was called into existence. In the relief work, the statistics are even more interesting in their results. During the six weeks that it has been in operation, there were 24,409 visits made to families, and of these, 2,839 families needed relief and were supplied. The number of children furnished with provisions was 5,843, besides 874 adults. The number of medical visits made was 1,247, besides 161 made gratuitously. The number of families at present receiving relief is 812, in which 1,940 children enjoy the benefits of the fund. The number of children remaining under medical attendance is 94, and of the whole number so far attended 513 have been restored to health—a wonderful result. The expense of this branch of the fund was $9,641 83. These facts carry their own lesson, and prove the great necessity for some such movement in this crowded City during the hot months of every recurring year.

Although sixteen excursions will have been given by the close of the present week, the balance of the fund still in hand will be large enough to enable us to make arrangements for a few more picnics, if the weather seems to require them, in order that the children of the poor may enjoy the full benefit of the money placed in our hands. The relief movement will, of course, continue for some weeks, after which we shall consult with the contributors of the fund as to the disposition of the amount remaining unexpended. It will doubtless be considered best by them to keep it as a nucleus for the operations of next Summer, in which case we shall place it in trust and at interest for that purpose. The sum now received raises the total amount subscribed to upward of $19,000. We hope that next year the business of superintending these picnics will be kindly undertaken by Mr. Brace, of the Children's Aid Society. We have done the work this year with much satisfaction and pleasure, but it has been at a cost of labor and anxiety little known by any one outside our own office. The fund has, however, been the means of doing a vast amount of good, and, under Providence, of saving hundreds of lives; and we may honestly say, that no money ever subscribed for purposes of charity was more economically administered than this. There has been no expense for officers or secretaries. We have paid all the actual expenses of managing the picnics, and we sincerely hope that the plan thus commenced will become a permanent feature of our City life in the Summer.

Their Loss our Gain.

At about the time of the Cincinnati Convention, and its wretched miscarriage in the nomination of HORACE GREELEY, the little crowd of enraged politicians and Tammany Republicans surrounding that unhappy old man were all shouting at the top of their voices that the Republican Party had survived its usefulness—indeed, was practically dead. The Republican Party, however, declined to accept the dreadful fate to which it was consigned even by these authorities, and speedily gave abundant evidence not only of life, but of vigorous and aggressive existence. There are men who fondly imagine that their own withdrawal from any party reduces their former companions to a state of helpless confusion and despair. It is needless to say that such persons take too gloomy a view of the situation. Indeed, it sometimes happens that their loss turns out to be a great gain to the cause they abandon. No honest Republican, for instance, suffers very acutely because the Tammany Democracy has swallowed FENTON. On the contrary, we all feel that it is eminently a case of the right man in the right place, and an increase of purity and harmony in our State Republican organization promptly succeeds the welcome desertion of so bad a man.

The fact is that the Republican Party was never more united, more thoroughly convinced of the necessity of its existence, more determined on success, and never better organized to win success, than it is today. The boobies who predicted its death forgot that the Republican Party is a party of ideas and convictions, conscience and definite aim; that its vote is not to be bartered or controlled by trading politicians, but will be cast in truth and earnestness for the principles it professes, and to secure the completion of the work which it has set itself to do. Turning the Tribune from a Republican into a Democratic organ is not, as that paper has found out to its cost, equivalent to carrying the Republican Party over to Tammany. Mr. GREELEY and the Tribune may make such a somersault with what grace they may be able, and with such professions of conscience as they may deem necessary, but the party which made them both cannot take the leap. So it counts them out, and goes on without them to maintain its principles, fighting the harder because of the defection which it means to turn into a source of power.

From all parts of the country, we get reports of marvelous activity among Republicans. They have never fought a Presidential campaign with more earnestness than they are exhibiting in this one. United, harmonious, devoted to their principles, and indignant at the abandonment of them by a few discontented politicians, they are determined that their cause shall not only succeed, but succeed so signally as to give a death-blow to their enemies, and purify our politics by the popular repudiation of the most disreputable bargain ever attempted in the history of American partisan contests. Neither TILTON nor KILPATRICK, nor HAGERTY nor COCHRANE, need waste any time in reading funeral orations over the Republican Party. It is not only alive, but the healthier for having sloughed them off.

The British Association.

The philosophers are becoming more reverent. That is, if we may judge by their annual manifesto to the outside world, as delivered by Dr. WILLIAM B. CARPENTER, the President for the year, of the British Association. During the thirty-six years of its existence this body has been accustomed to make itself the mouth-piece of the severest militant, as against the frequently denunciatory and always objurgatory theologian. But, according to Dr. CARPENTER, the men of science are beginning to perceive that their method of induction may not be the measure of the universe after all, that the sublime modesty of a KEPLER and a NEWTON is more worthy of imitation than the offensive dogmatism of sundry self-styled philosophers, not unknown to contemporary literature. The great physiologist protests against the common tendency of the mechanical philosophy of the day to express itself in terms of motion, rather than in terms of force, i. e., to dwell more upon the mere succession of phenomena than on the "efficient cause" of their occurrence. Further, he protests against assuming the purely human conception of scientific law, or, in other words, our record of the observation of certain orderly sequences in nature, to be an infallible expression of the ideas of its Great Author. To exclude from or render unnecessary to the operation of such laws, the power which alone can give them effect, appears to Dr. CARPENTER to be "as arrogant as it is unphilosophical." That there may be no mistake about his meaning, the President of the British Association summarizes the scope of scientific pursuits in the following sentences, which are as eloquent as they are terse and perspicuous:

"But when science, passing beyond its own limits, assumes to take the place of theology and sets up its own conception of the order of nature as a sufficient account of its cause, it is invading a province of thought to which it has no claim, and not unreasonably provokes the hostility of those who ought to be its best friends. For, while the deep-seated instincts of humanity and the profoundest researches of philosophy alike point to mind as the one and only source of power, it is the prerogative of science to demonstrate the unity of the power which is operating through the limitless extent and variety of the universe, and to trace its continuity through the vast series of ages that have been occupied in its evolution."

Apart from the loftiness of its tone and purpose, there is nothing very new to be found in the inaugural address. Addressing an audience whose popular elements greatly exceeded its scientific ones, Dr. CARPENTER is, of course, compelled to adopt a style of somewhat familiar exposition of things which, scientifically speaking, are among the rudiments of the philosophies. The only attempt at independent speculation to be found in the address, is a contribution made to the controversy between the intuitionalists and the experimentalists, i. e., between the people who hold that we are born with a mental tendency to form certain primary beliefs about space, time, extension and the like, and those who hold that all our knowledge is founded upon certain generalizations made consciously or unconsciously from actual experience. This metaphysical squabble is as old as philosophy itself. The "innate idea" men find abundant illustration of their dogmas in the Dialogues of Plato, and the people who swear by experience can draw plenty of ammunition from ARISTOTLE's logic and metaphysics. A similar divergence of speculative standpoint set the school-men of the middle ages by the ears, under the opposing factions of Nominalists and Realists. JOHN LOCKE was understood to have settled the controversy on the side of experience, but KANT and the later Germans set things all abroad again; and, together with some deeper metaphysical mysteries which grew out of it, the controversy is, perhaps, fresher, and certainly rather better defined, in this year of grace than it has been throughout long ages of speculation.

Into this terrible muddle Dr. CARPENTER throws, with characteristic modesty, his little bit of physiologico-metaphysical suggestion. Nothing but his exact words can do justice to this, and here is the essential part of them:

"Now, as there can be no doubt of the hereditary transmission in man of acquired constitutional peculiarities, which manifest themselves alike in tendencies to bodily and to mental disease, so it seems equally certain that acquired mental habitudes often impress themselves on his organization, with sufficient force and permanence to occasion their transmission to the offspring as tendencies to similar modes of thought. And thus, while all admit that knowledge cannot thus descend from one generation to another, an increased aptitude for the acquirement, either of knowledge generally or of some particular kind of it, may be thus inherited. These tendencies and aptitudes will acquire additional strength, expansion and permanence in each new generation, from their habitual exercise upon the materials supplied by a continually enlarged experience; and thus the acquired habitudes produced by the intellectual culture of ages will become 'a second nature' to every one who inherits them."

Whether this throws any light upon the vexed question of the basis of knowledge may be safely left to the savants to decide. The theory would have been more satisfactory had the Doctor hazarded some explanation of the inexplicable exhaustion of certain "mental habitudes" in families as well as races. Not only do men "write themselves out," but the distinctive kind of energy which fixes the type to which they belong frequently refuses to be transmitted to their descendants. This may, and frequently does, happen in the presence of a remarkable similarity of physical contour and apparent cerebral likeness. Perhaps Dr. CARPENTER never thought over George Eliot's suggestive allusions to the omission in the organism of weak and sinning Hetty Sorrel of the hereditary counterparts to her face and manner. He must have known plenty of people, however, whose face and cranium were those of the ancestral type, but had become a mere mask as far as forming any index to the character of their possessor was concerned, and he could hardly be but conscious that the tempting generalities of his theory stood but indifferently well the test of special application.

MINOR TOPICS.

In the Greeley "organ" of yesterday there was a good sample of the process of incubating falsehood, according to the Tentonian canons of journalism. The slung is done in this way. In an obscure country paper called the Amsterdam Democrat, there appears on Friday, Aug. 23, the copy of a badly spelt letter purporting to have been sent by one E. TAYLOR, who dates from No. 225 East Ninth-street, and calls himself a TIMES reporter. This personage is supposed to be anxious to hear from Mr. JOHN KELLOGG, of Amsterdam, as to whether he has joined the Greeley camp. Thereupon the "Hon." JOHN makes haste to declare that the apocryphal E. TAYLOR has correctly indicated the actual fact, and that as the Democrat has it, he is "an out-and-out Greely Republican," whatever kind of monster that may be. Then the Tribune of yesterday quotes the story with the usual silly kind of commentary. Only it omits all mention of the Amsterdam Democrat and E. TAYLOR, who, from No. 225 East Ninth-street, wanted to be "obliged," and politely states that one of the persons employed on "the Times waste-paper basket" to learn the secretions of this precious "Hon." man of Amsterdam. It is hardly necessary for us to say that E. TAYLOR, if he exists at all, is an individual personally unknown to us. We have not taken the trouble to inquire who lives at No. 225 East Ninth-street, but examination would doubtless reveal the fact that there is somebody there who has been induced to perpetrate a clumsy forgery, either for the sake of gratifying the vanity of "Hon." Mr. KELLOGG, or for helping the Professor to a new falsehood, or for both these purposes combined.

So much has been asserted as to the terrible events of the last two years having failed to leave an enduring and appropriate impression on the face of French society, that it is gratifying to find a special correspondent telling quite a different tale, and descanting upon "the happy transformation" which a popular sea-side resort has undergone: "Swarms of children are playing on the beach, honorable mothers, and grave men who seek repose, are reappearing here, and with the example of that active, vigilant, patriotic old man, who, even at Trouville, devotes himself to the incessant labors which the wants of the country impose upon him, all the trifliers disappear, all the idle triflers absent themselves. France, now already restored to herself, begins to understand that the time of giddy laughter is passed away, and that the hour for work has struck." So that, taken with the loan, it would seem that moral and material France are at length keeping step.

A former resident of Arizona, who is thoroughly familiar with the so-called diamond regions, asserts that Arizona diamonds are nothing more than peculiarly brilliant quartz crystals. Of these he has repeatedly collected large quantities, for the amusement of the little coterie of his acquaintance, among whom he has thus lavished incalculable wealth,—provided quartz crystals and diamonds are synonymous. Even were the extravagant stories of the unused wealth of Arizona to be literally true, it would be madness for any one to attempt to reach the diamond region except in company with a well-armed and abundantly-provisioned caravan. The country is completely barren, and swarms with hostile savages. If any man wishes to risk his health, and waste his time, in digging for diamonds, South Africa can be reached by him much more easily than Arizona, and in South Africa it is certain that diamonds have been found, however few and far between such lucky discoveries may have been.

The "patent places" in England are rapidly disappearing, and probably in another quarter of a century there will scarcely be one left of those good things which were secured to HORACE WALPOLE, by a thoughtful parent's care, to the extent of twenty thousand dollars a year, while still a minor. The clerkship of the Court of King's Bench, worth forty thousand dollars a year, lapsed lately by the death of Lord ELLENBOROUGH, who for about half a century had drawn that snug salary for doing nothing; and now an act has just been passed abolishing the immensely valuable office of Accountant-General of the Court of Chancery. This has long been held by a relative of the Duke of BEDFORD, and it need scarcely be said that "vested interests" have been religiously respected.

Berlin and New-York are a good deal more like each other than were Monmouth and Macedon. For example, of all European cities the death-rate of Berlin comes nearest to that of New-York. Then again, its streets seem to be in quite as bad condition as ours. To remedy this latter defect a sapient Berlin town-councilor lately proposed, as a correspondent puts it,

"A plan 'of his own invention,' by which the streets should be gradually, progressively and successively repaired, at the rate of so many thalers per prospective year, on a sort of ascending-sliding scale. The scheme at its first blush found considerable support; but upon being submitted to an analytical process, it was found that, taking the streets alphabetically and repairing them upon Herr ——'s system, one hundred and seven years would elapse ere the last Z street could be submitted to the proposed improvements, by which time it was found to be probable that the A-street—not to mention any other of the earlier letters of the alphabet—would prove to be somewhat out of order. The scheme, in so many respects so eminently in keeping with the spirit of enterprise animating our Town Council, was, in consequence of this unexpected difficulty, shelved, and only when the subject of comprehensive street-repair was shelved for the scheme."

The plan thus condemned in the cautious words of the Berlin councilor appears to be identically like that which, without any deliberate invention at all, has been for some time the favorite one in New-York.

Senator Robertson.

To guard against possible misapprehension in reference to Senator Robertson, permit me to say that Gen. Dix's nomination meets with that gentleman's hearty approval, and will receive his cordial support. I met Senator Robertson at Albany on Thursday. But for the general belief that Gen. Dix would not accept the nomination, Mr. Robertson's name would not have been presented to the Convention. I also conversed with Hon. John R. Ketcham, Senator Robertson's most confidential friend, who was equally well pleased with the nomination of Gen. Dix. The long and intimate personal and political friendship which has existed between Senator Robertson and myself enables me to say with undoubting confidence that no friend who consults his wishes will fail to support the Republican State and national tickets. The Times on the Cars.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I have noticed (for some time back) in the Madison-avenue cars, a large demand for the NEW-YORK TIMES over the other New-York papers, and during the past week I kept an account of the different papers each day, and the following was the result, viz.:

	Times.	Herald.	Sun.	Tribune.	World.
Aug. 20	30	4	2	1	1
Aug. 21	7	1	1	1	1
Aug. 22	11	4	1	1	1
Aug. 23	10	4	2	1	1
Aug. 24	16	4	2	1	1
Total	74	17	8	4	4

The car on which this account has been made is the 7:30 A. M. train, Eighty-sixth-street.

NEW-YORK, Monday, Aug. 26, 1872. J. A. S.

The Times in Jersey City.

A correspondent writes: "Much complaint is made here against the news-dealers for the want of a supply of the TIMES, as it is nearly an impossibility for the late business men to get hold of a copy. The news-dealers tell us that they increase their number every day, and then cannot supply the demand, while Heralds, Worlds and Suns can be had all day, until closing time in the evening."

The Apollo Hall Democracy.

Mr. Alexander V. Davidson, Secretary of the Executive Committee of the Apollo Hall Democracy, says that the report relating to the next meeting of the Committee in a morning paper yesterday, is a tissue of lies, in so far as it states that notice will be given only to O'Brien's friends, or that the meeting has been called to further the private ends of O'Brien. Notice has been regularly sent, and in good time, to every member of the Executive Committee. The Executive Committee numbers 216 members, ten from each Assembly district, and is the actual working part of the Reform Democracy machine. The meeting is a special one, and there is little doubt but that important business will be transacted.

THE STRAIGHT DEMOCRATS.

Social Convention at Long Branch—Horace Greeley and Rice Certain Announced—Delegates Appointed to Attend the Louisville Convention.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Aug. 26.—A number of straight-out Democrats met here at noon today in response to the following call:

BALTIMORE, Aug. 19, 1872.

DEAR SIR: The Executive Committee appointed by the Democrat National Conference held at the Metropolitan Hotel, Long Branch, N. J., June 20, 1872, having fulfilled their duties imposed on them by the Conference, are ready to make their report, and respectfully invite you to attend a meeting of the Executive Committee, at the Metropolitan Hotel, Long Branch, N. J., on Monday, Aug. 26, 1872, to hear the report of the Committee, and take such action on the report may require. You will please notice that the communication is strictly personal.

By order of the Executive Committee.
HENRY R. WILLIAMSON, Secretary.

The meeting was called to order by Henry Thompson, of Pennsylvania, who nominated J. R. Gilbert, of Kentucky, for Chairman, and was elected. Mr. Gilbert, upon taking the chair, made the following speech:

GENTLEMEN: I am deeply gratified at being permitted to meet with you again. We have come together as Democrats for the purpose of considering what is best for the protection and maintenance of those great and principles which have animated our party in the past and which are yet deeply cherished by millions of true men throughout the land. We are met to consider measures and means for opposing and protesting against the disposition on the part of certain Democratic politicians throughout the country, who are attempting to sell and deliver the Democratic Party into the hands of its most violent and bitter enemy. We are met as men who are not willing to join hands with the enemy only for the purpose of dividing the spoils which may thus possibly be won. It gratified me, I had never before been able to approve of the indorsement of Mr. Greeley by the Democracy, since his recent speech at Portland, Me., it seems that I should change. I read his words with shame and with surprise. It was the boldest bid for the purchase of the votes of honest men that any public character ever dared to make in the face of his past record. He proclaimed that he still retained those Republican principles and was prepared to advocate the same policy of hatred that had always characterized him in the past, and yet he now says to the Democracy of the country—"vote for me, and I will forget the principles that I do, pledged to the same policy as in the past, and in return I will give you the loaves and fishes." He proffers offices for our disgrace. It is an insult, gentlemen, to every man whose heart beats in sympathy with Democratic ideas and principles—a burning insult to every honest Democrat in the nation.

It behooves us to act! The Democratic Party is not dead, as those who would sell us to Radicalism would assume! Is still lives, and will continue to live for the good of our land. The time will come when it will gain power and be able to protect and defend the Constitution, which is now, as it has always been, its platform. No honest man, gentlemen, can enter into this Liberal Dolly Varden combination and remain a Democrat. If gentlemen desire to enlist in the Radical ranks let them do so; but, if they would claim to be Democrats, they must agree with contempt the bid of Mr. Greeley for our votes.

We are now to consider, gentlemen, measures for the maintenance of the national existence of the Democratic Party. Let every one lend his heartiest aid in the selection of good, true and tried Democrats to the National Convention which will soon meet in Louisville—a convention which will name as a candidate for the Presidency a gentleman who will receive the votes of every Democrat in the country who has not forfeited his self respect by selling himself for office to our enemy. [Great applause.]

The Committee which was appointed by the Conference that met here on the 20th day of June then submitted the following report: That after their appointment they attended the Baltimore Convention, and, from all indications, it was evident that the Democrats present had not the real heart in the part they were performing. All regarded the nomination of Horace Greeley, a life-long opponent and villifier of the Democracy, as a farce and an attempt at fraud upon the party, instigated by the party, in the vain hope of securing political power. Indeed, life-long Democrats carefully kept away from the Convention, and few renowned and time-honored Democrats in names appear upon its rolls. He concluded by recommending the nomination, they were fair to be political suicide, as a Convention separated without enthusiasm, having nominated two Republicans for President and Vice-President, and adopted a Republican platform. What a fate for the Half Democratic Party. Your Committee also attended the Democratic Convention at the Maryland Institute, at which the resolutions were adopted denouncing the nomination of Greeley and Brown, and protested against the action of the Ford's Theatre Convention as the dissolution of the Democratic Party. This Convention, although not large in numbers, was inspired by the true spirit, and amid the obloquy of office-seeking politicians it decided to keep alive the Democratic party and to preserve unbroken the Democratic Party organization. This organization has since called a Convention to meet at Louisville, Ky., Sept. 2, to nominate Democratic candidates for President and Vice-President.

Since the adjournment of the Baltimore Convention your Committee has carefully investigated the political situation and watched the progress of events. They are only confirmed in the opinion that the nomination of Greeley and Brown is political suicide. Hundreds of Democrats are bolting from Greeley, and declaring their intention of voting for Grant unless a Democratic candidate is presented. A Republican victory in North Carolina is the first fruits of the disunion sentiment. We cannot, therefore, and the salvation of the Democratic Party; its only hope of success in the present, or, if defeated, of honor or even of existence in the future, depends upon bold and immediate action for the purpose of placing before the nation Democratic candidates and a Democratic platform; to rescue the votes of honest Democrats who will not sell themselves to Horace Greeley, Charles Sumner, John Cochrane, Reuben E. Fenton and Alexander McClure.

The path of duty and honor is the path of safety. By the nomination at Louisville of that patriotic Democrat, Charles O'Conor, the Democratic party will be true to itself. What Democrat, what Republican even, will vote against Charles O'Conor in favor of Horace Greeley or Ulysses S. Grant.

Your Committee, therefore, recommend the passage of the accompanying resolutions:

Resolved, That all true Democrats be urged to use their influence to prevent the success of time-serving, office-seeking politicians to sell the Democratic Party to Horace Greeley and his corrupt Republican followers, and that delegates from every Congressional district in the United States should be sent to the National Democratic Convention, at Louisville, on Sept. 2, 1872.

Resolved, That the Chairman be authorized to appoint a full Committee to attend the Louisville Convention, in behalf of the Conference, with instructions to urge the nomination of Charles O'Conor as President of the United States.

Resolved, That we pledge ourselves to all good Democrats throughout the United States to support the nominations that will be made in Louisville on Sept. 2, 1872. That in so doing we but carry out the principles of Jefferson and Jackson, whose memory and good deeds are hundred and revered by all. Therefore, be it

Resolved, That we combine all our strength in making the ticket for support of our candidates, knowing that it is the duty of all true friends of Democracy and Reform, men but men of pure Democratic principles can save our country from the anarchy and disruption with which it is now threatened by two rival factions, whose only desire is to possess office. Under such circumstances, it behoves us, as good citizens, to lend ourselves to this cause, as did our forefathers when battling for freedom in 1776, when his, liberty and all dear sacrifices were at stake. The crisis of 1776 is similar to that of 1872, and the result to be obtained is the same.

(Signed,)
HENRY THOMPSON, of Pennsylvania.
HORACE BLACK, of Delaware.
RICHARD HENDERSON, of West Virginia.
WILSON PERRY, of New-Jersey.
J. R. GILBERT, of Kentucky.
WILSON M. CUNTIS, of Ohio.
HENRY R. WILLIAMSON, of Maryland.

On motion the Committee's report and resolutions were unanimously adopted. On motion the Committee were then discharged from further duties, with a vote of thanks.

The Chairman then announced the following as the Committee to the Louisville Convention: Horace Black, of Delaware; Henry R. Williamson, Robert Preston and Edgar Gerold, of Maryland; Henry Thompson, John Appleseed, of Pennsylvania; Richard Henderson, of West Virginia; Wilson Perry, of New-Jersey; J. R. Gilbert, of Kentucky; Rufus Ranney, of Ohio; Charles Martin, George Gulden and James O'Brien, of New-York.

On motion the meeting adjourned, subject to the call of the Chair.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Session of the Two Conventions—Nomination of Candidates—Platforms Adopted.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Aug. 26.—The Republican State Convention this morning adopted a platform with additional planks, pledging the party that public schools and institutions shall not be closed for want of maintenance by the State; acknowledging the right of the Federal Government to interpose for the preservation of peace and thanking the Government for what it has done in this State; asking the Executive clemency for ignorant and misdeaning persons convicted under the Enforcement act; in favor of immigration, and for the establishment of factories for the development of the State, and pledging the party to treat all comers with consideration and justice. The only excitement during the morning session was caused by a fierce and specific attack by R. J. Mackey, upon the bolters' ticket and its supporters, which was vociferously applauded by the Convention. He was especially severe in his arraignment of Governor Scott and Attorney General Chamberlain, whom, he said, he had formerly trusted. The following is the nominee ticket of the regular Convention: S. A. Swails, colored; W. E. Tolbert, white; Henry Spencer, white; R. J. Mackey, white; D. H. Chamberlain, white; William Gurney, white; Richard Gleaton, colored.

The Convention adjourned, subject to the call of the Chairman.

The Bolters' Convention met and nominated a ticket by nomination J. H. Hayne (colored) for Lieutenant-Governor, Macon B. Allen (colored) for Secretary of State, J. Scott Murray (white) for Comptroller-General, W. D. Geary (white) for State Treasurer, R. L. Roberts, (colored) Superintendent of Education.

A platform was adopted indorsing President Grant and the Philadelphia platform; denouncing the State Government as imbecile and corrupt; pledging the State to pay all honestly and lawfully contracted debts; promising an honest administration and a reduction of taxes; denouncing the pledges of the regular candidates as mere blunds for selfish ends, and declaring no law can protect the Treasury if the regular candidates be elected; denouncing the general license law, and the failure of the Administration of the State to educate the people.

After arranging for the organization of the party, the Convention adjourned.

MISSOURI.

Proceedings of the Indian Council at the Cheyenne Agency.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 26.—The Times, to-morrow, will publish a letter from the Indian Council at the Cheyenne Agency, which brings the proceedings down to the 18th inst. Live Wolf, the principal Chief of the Kiowas, made a speech, in which he said before any peace can be made with the Government the military must be removed from the country, Fort Sill abandoned, and the soldiers sent home. Raiding into Texas, he said, they would never be willing to renounce. The Gainparikes, Quatadas and guerilla bands of Mexicans make that country their hunting ground, and the Kiowas will never give up their share of the spoils. The Council expected to adjourn the next day after the letter was written.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 26.—The strike of the coal miners of St. Clair County, Illinois, which was supposed to have ended some days ago, took a fresh start today. At a meeting of miners, near Belleville today, it was decided by the sixteen Unless expressed to hold out for four cents a bushel, the price demanded at the outset, the strike will seriously affect manufacturers and private consumers here, as St. Louis obtains which the largest amount she uses from the mines of St. Clair County.

Meeting of the Tammany Hall General Committee.

The Tammany General Committee met at Tammany Hall last evening, John W. Chanler presiding. There was an unusually large attendance. Prominent among the persons assembled were Henry Genet, Gen. Spinola, Ex-Supervisor John Fox, Judge Coulter, Alderman Woltman, Augustus Schell, John Kelley, Edward Slam, Martin L. Keser, John Develin, Henry Oberle, and all of the "gang," minus Tweed, Hall, Sweeny, and a few others. The meeting was held to issue a call for primary elections for delegates to the Democratic State Convention to be held Sept. 4, and to transact other business. The Chairman said that the call of the Committee was in reality a recommendation that the Democracy meet in their several Assembly districts in response to a call issued by the Democratic State Committee. On motion of Mr. John Kelley, it was Resolved, That we recommend to the several Assembly District Committees to meet in their several election districts in each of the Assembly districts, on Wednesday, Aug. 28, between 7½ and 10 o'clock P. M., to appoint three inspectors of election, who shall hold election for one delegate in each of the election districts to meet in Assembly Convention, on Friday, the 30th instant, at 8 o'clock P. M., and from said Convention shall be chosen one delegate and an alternate to represent each district at the State Convention, to meet at Syracuse on the 4th day of September next.

Resolved, That when the delegates are chosen, we recommend the Assembly Convention by which they were chosen to give said delegate a certificate signed by the Chairman and the Secretaries, together with the certificate of inspectors of election in each of the election districts, that the member representing the district in the Assembly Convention was duly authorized to sit in said Assembly Convention for said election district.

Printed copies of the by-laws recently adopted were then distributed to the various members of the Committee.

Mr. Kelley moved that the roll be called, and that district delegations present a list of vacancies to be filled or substitutions to be made, and that the names of the candidates be referred to the Committee on Organization. It was found after roll-call that there were four places to fill. A recess of a half hour was then taken to allow the Committee on Organization to take action. The Committee reported Jas. Fox, Lehman and Henry Oberle to fill vacancies in the Fifth District in place of —— Lammerle and Louis Oberle, and Andrew Holly to fill a vacancy in the Ninth District, in place of James O'Neill, deceased. Mr. E. Pinn, in behalf of a minority of the delegates of the Fifth District, presented a resolution asking for the removal of Warren O. Bennet and the substitution of Michael Norton. Mr. Bennet is charged in the resolution with repudiating the organization and its action, taking no part in its councils, and allying himself with Apollo Hall. After some discussion it was resolved that Mr. Bennett's seat be declared vacant under the by-laws, and that the question of filling the vacancy be referred to the Committee on Organization. As Norton appeared to be the popular choice of the General Committee, he will probably be appointed. A war of words was then indulged in by a delegate with a huge shirt-collar, John Kelley and a number of other members relative to the form of the call or recommendation issued by the Committee. He was under the impression that there was a trick in it, by which certain leaders would carry measure their own way. It was shown that it was drawn up to agree with the State Committee's call, and to avoid the difficulties which had several times attended the admission of Tammany Hall delegates to State Conventions. The delegate was charged by another with a desire to create this difficulty in September. After this rather stormy episode the meeting adjourned.

INSPECTORS OF ELECTION.

Important Action of the Reform Association.

The Executive Committee of the Reform Association held a meeting at No. 2 Astor House, at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, at which they discussed the Chairman to sign and forward forthwith the following letter:

REFORM ASSOCIATION, EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE,
NEW-YORK, Aug. 26, 1872.

Henry Smith, Esq., President of the Board of Police Commissioners:

SIR: Under the new Election law, the appointment of four inspectors and two poll clerks of election for each of the 511 election districts in this City, is given to your Board. To secure an honest and just election it is absolutely necessary that none but faithful and honorable citizens should be intrusted with such an important duty, as the very existence of our Government depends upon the impartiality and fidelity of the election officers.

Three years ago your Board appointed all the canvassers of the elections, a large number of whom were Deputy Sheriffs and other office-holders, who, as appears by the sworn testimony before Congress, without even opening the ballots, admitting after ward that they had to obey orders.

It was well understood at that time, among many candidates for elections, that if they were not appointed as canvassers, votes for them would not be counted, and they declined to go into the canvass at all; these facts are no doubt better known to you than to any other man.

The Association and the German Reform Association have enrolled upward of 35,000 voters, pledged to vote for honest, capable men for City officers, regardless of National and State politics, and against your Board appointing as inspectors of election any men holding office under the City, state or National Government.

We request your Board to submit names of two good citizens, one a Republican and one a Democrat—1,022 names in all—that is two for each election district, and we request your Board to appoint them. We shall select committees of the Reform Association, merchants and bank clerks or other good citizens, (not office-holders,) all of whom shall also be approved of by the Committee of Seventy. After those two are appointed for each election district, you will have still four more to appoint for each election district.

We request your Board to signify to us through our Chairman whether it we furnish you the names of two inspectors for each election district, one from each political party, and proper persons, you will appoint them.

Executive Committee—Gerald Ottendorfer, John Foley, John H. Strahan, Roswell D. Hatch, Myer Stern, Jacob Worms, Jr., Jos. Seligman, Wm. F. Havemeyer, Robt. B. Roosevelt, J. M. Bundy, Henry Clausen, Jr., John H. Draper, Patrick McKinry, Henry Ancell, Andrew R. Green.

JOHN FOLEY,
Chairman Executive Committee,
No. 2 Astor House.

Greeley's Organ and Mr. Blanton Duncan.

The following has been forwarded to the New-York Tribune, but will probably not be published in that journal:

LOUISVILLE, Aug. 26, 1872.

To the Editor of the New-York Tribune:

In reading a German paper today I find a quotation from your journal, in which you comment in strong terms upon the alleged action of the Grant Committee in distributing my circular address by tens of thousands for the purpose of injuring Mr. Greeley's prospects, and it is assumed, therefore, that I am in Gen. Grant's interest. I believe there is a notable precedent for such action.

Your New-York General Committee (of which Mr. Greeley, I think, was then Chairman) distributed hundreds of thousands of Wade Hampton's speech to injure Horatio Seymour. Oliver Charlick expressed his great disgust to me at finding that this was the first order given to a friend of his to whom he had just loaned money to start a printing-office. May I ask whether Gen. Hampton was at that time in collision with Gen. Grant and Mr. Greeley?

Now, I will propose a fair thing. I will distribute for the Greeley Committee all the documents they may send me, (especially Senator Sumner's letter and his Washington speech,) which attempt to prove that the people ought not to support Gen. Grant.

And I will distribute for the Grant Committee any documents proving the same relative to Mr. Greeley, provided that in each case the documents are attacks and not arguments for their own candidate.

And I will issue other documents to demonstrate beyond peradventure that both are right, and that our Louisville nominees are the only fit persons to be elected.

Either course will be the fair thing, and so impartial that you cannot complain therefor.

As you will both have greater facilities than I can command, and you will both be rendering great service to the people, I trust the documents will all be franked, and thus save me any postage. Very respectfully,

BLANTON DUNCAN.

Greeley Gospel Committee—Banner Raising Last Night—Arrangements for Tuesday Meetings.

A Greeley and Brown banner was raised last evening opposite No. 214 Broadway, under the auspices of the Liberal Republican General Committee. After the outside ceremony had been completed the spectators adjourned to the large hall within, where a meeting was in progress under the presidency of Mr. Daniel D. Conover. Thos. E. Stewart was first introduced, and after a brief speech retired to make way for Jas. Q. Ellis (colored.) The bonces of whose discourse was the attitude of the Democratic Party, which, he said, having only dead issues to stand upon, had repented of its wrongs and gone over to Greeley. The speaker informed his auditors that he never read the TIMES, although he had written for that journal nearly 20 years, daily comments of the journal in question, an inconsistency which was readily appreciated by the audience. Mr. H. M. Parmalee followed with an account of the terrible fate in store for the Union in case of Grant's re-election. Gen. John Cochrane, who had hadn't come prepared to make a speech, "wound up" the evening's with a speech, declaring the voters of the Union to be almost unanimous for Greeley, yet he desired every man to do his duty if he would avoid defeat for their party in November. The meeting was unusually demonstrative, and at times enthusiastic.

The Committee also decided on Friday evening next for the election of delegates for the Liberal Republican State Convention, which meets at Syracuse on Sept. 4.

Grant and Wilson Banner-Raising in Williamsburg.

Last night witnessed a grand rally of the Williamsburg Fourteenth Ward Grant and Wilson Club, which took place at the corner of Fourth and North Fifth-streets, ratifying the Philadelphia nominations. A Grant and Wilson Banner was raised.

The meeting was composed of a general gathering of the voters of the north side of Williamsburg, and when with banners, bon-fires, flags, fire-works, Chinese lanterns and the stirring speeches, great enthusiasm was witnessed. Considering that this ward has been a Democratic stronghold, the large meeting in attendance speaks volumes and indicates a decided change in favor of reform. At 8 o'clock the meeting was brought to order by the President, S. S. Maddox, who introduced Col. James Tanner, of Williamsburg.

He spoke of the Republican Party as being very proud of its candidates, and their history, and also the history of of its own career as a great and good party. In speaking of the morals of the Democratic Party in years past he said: God save us from the rule of the Democratic Party, they failed us long enough to cause us into a bloody chasm, but which Gen. Grant was now fast closing up. When that chasm shall have been finally covered up, as it will be next November, the Democratic Party will be buried low down in it.

Col. Zenko, of Virginia, Col. Sparrow, of the Fifteenth Ward, and Mr. Fairchild, of Williamsburg, after ward addressed the meeting, which soon after dispersed.

The Ex-President of San Salvador.

Dr. Duenas, the late President of San Salvador, who recently arrived in New-York, being expelled from his native country, is lying dangerously ill at the Hotel Espanol, in Fourth-street. The distinguished exile is in an almost hopeless condition, and grave fears are entertained of the result. Dr. Duenas' family, consisting of his wife and five children, are sojourning with him. Two South American Indian nurses accompany the party, and attract great attention on the streets.

THE OUTLOOK.

Advices Received by the Republican National Committee.

Visitors and letters from all parts of the country to the Fifth-avenue Head-quarters convey the most encouraging tidings of Republican organization and the firm hold which the party maintains in the hearts of the masses. Signs of the division and disintegration of the Liberal Republicans and Democratic combination in many States are also indicated. The nearer the approach of the election the more enunciative becomes the "Greeley pill" which Tammany Hall would force upon the national Democracy. These extracts from letters illustrate the political sentiment in many States of the Union:

A letter from Missouri, from a prominent Republican there, says:

"The Democrats in our county (Gasconade County) had their Convention some two weeks ago, and succeeded only booted our Liberal friends out of the Convention and crowded them out of the Liberal ranks. Democrats are better faith further professions of the Democrats. The news from North Carolina make long faces among the Greeleyites.

"The ball has fairly opened relinquishing and gaining strength and size every day, and I really think the State will give a handsome majority for Grant.

"The Louisville Convention has done its work good and there are many Democrats among us who will vote for its nominee in preference to Greeley. I know twenty fifty will vote for Brown, and twenty-fifty for Greeley and Brown are good, heaven knows."

Another letter from Missouri says:

"The Republicans in this part of Missouri (near St. Louis) are very hopeful. The Germans are all Republicans. Every Sunday morning in one German brewery here there are thirty-two Germans employed, and all but five are going to vote the Republican ticket. All these men two years ago voted the Liberal ticket. As a Democrat I feel able to give aid to the Greeley ticket, it is a great blunder. The Liberals here are disgusted with him, and many Democrats alike detest him. * * * I know of several Democrats who will not vote for Greeley under any circumstance, but will vote for the Louisville nominee should there be one."

H. J. C., Columbus, Ohio, writes:

"The prospects here are brightening every day. Enthusiasm among the Republicans is wide-spread, and it has taken hold of the Democrats, especially among the young men. The Tanners' Club, a Grant organization here, now numbers 1,400 young men, many of them having lately been Democrats. Four years ago this Association numbered only 40.

The man is a fool who doubts which way this State will go in November."

C. H. H., Chicago, Ill., writes:

"Greeley stock is on the decline. The enthusiastic blowing of the Liberals is heard no longer, and they wear long faces. * * * We shall carry the state by 40,000. Every day the prospects improve for Grant. Our money's spent uniformly for Grant, and, of course, they will have great weight in the canvass."

T. W. O., Jacksonville, Fla., writes, the 17th:

"The Conventions are over, and the tickets are in the field. The Republican ticket is a good and strong one. The Democrats nominated a straight-out ticket, which, I suppose, you will have received. The Liberals but about extreme bolted and have come back to us. This clique of extreme went with the Democrats on an absolute surrender. The prospects throughout the State are very encouraging."

E. E. C., Plattsmouth, Nebraska, writes:

"The campaign has been fairly opened in the east and we hear good news from there, and we begin to believe. But the outlook is brightening every day, and I think we have a splendid show of success in November. * * * The Germans here are coming over to Grant and Wilson by the dozen."

G. C., a late New-Hampshire Greeley man, writes:

"I cannot shut my eyes any longer to the inconsistency of the mean range, where lead I looked for reform. Greeley is not the man that I hoped he was, nor is he acting as I expected. Many men are with me in my disappointment. We feel that we had better bide the ills we have than fly to those we know not of."

O. C. M., another New-Hampshire man, writes:

"You need not be anxious about New-Hampshire. We shall carry the State hard and dry. The man Greeley Republican has come out—now it is our turn to come out Democrats. We shall show our hand at the proper moment."

P. B., Montgomery, Ala., writes:

"Our Republican Convention was composed of active and tried Union men, and was most harmonious. The nominations give the utmost satisfaction, and with a good State Committee we can carry everything before us in November."

G. H. D. writes from New-Jersey:

"The colored vote here is a unit for Grant. Hardly any white colored votes for the latter will be given for Greeley. Our last State election gave 5,000 Democratic majority. I look for a large reduction. The defections from the Republicans are as set down, and, I think, among many Democrats who will not vote for Greeley under any circumstances. The Louisville Convention is their only hope they say."

J. H. W. sends the following from Maine:

"I have been over a great part of the State, and I find an intense feeling here for Grant, and unbounded confidence in the Republican ticket of September. Now, mark my words. Instead of the majority of Maine being reduced by the unholy alliance, I am satisfied that it will be increased over last year. * * The Democrats do not feel very proud at the figure Hon. Sumner cuts in this town. [Portland.] The impression he made here was not a benefit to his cause."

J. H. G. writes from Richmond, Va.:

"Under proper exertions and judicious management Virginia can be carried for Grant. We intend to carry on a spirited and aggressive canvass, and our friends here are in much more hopeful of his result in the State in November."

Advices from Vermont all indicate a handsome Republican majority in the election to come off the 3d of next month. Vermont letters are all in an encouraging vein, and no doubt is expressed of our success there.

A letter from North Carolina says:

"The late election has convinced me that the secret Ku-Klux organization still lives here. The result in the strongest Democratic localities shows this. These are thoroughly organized, and the machinery of the order is energetically used. But we shall carry the State for Grant in November without a doubt.

The Louisville Convention is mentioned only by many Democrats here, who say they will vote for its candidate."

G. C. C. writes from Columbia, S. C., the 19th:

"I tell you the Ku-Klux are as venomous today as they ever were, and blessed Mr. Greeley is dearer to Southern people than Christ without thank and injury. I hope that the South will be heard in action in the speeches of the North, and that the truth may be told of the internal organization."

C. H. R. writes from San Francisco, Cal., as follows:

"I have been up to Oregon, which state is all right for Grant. Here in California the Republicans are hopeful, and are ready and preparing to do hard work to carry the State. I am sure the Pacific Coast will give a musical ring in November."

From Mississippi the advices are encouraging. The Democrats and Liberals have a strong ticket in nomination, but there is no doubt but that the State will be carried for Grant in November.

From Texas, Georgia and Kentucky, letters received show a wide-spread interest in those States in the work of the Louisville Convention. Especially in Kentucky and Georgia is this feeling prevalent, and to some extent in Virginia. Should that Convention put in nomination a manly Democrat, and "let go" Greeley, advices are that he will receive a great many votes of Democrats who will not vote for Greeley.

From Indiana, the Committee are in receipt of many letters, all hopeful of the result in October, and the advices from that State say the State is sure to go Republican.

Some of the Democratic papers have asserted that Gen. Sickles has gone to Spain to escape making a decided expression of opinion, or to avoid taking an active part in the Presidential campaign. The following letter, written from Luchon, France, under the date of July 30, explains the matter in a perfectly sensible sense: neither Sickles about the Greeley-Democratic medicine:

"My throat troubles me a good deal, he says, "and I am advised to try the waters of Luchon, the Spa Springs for the restoration of my voice, which has been seriously affected. The doctor says I must gargle, bathe, and drink warm sulphur water three times a day. The said water issues at 117 from through an aqueduct flavored with rotten eggs. Talk of French cooking, and then think of a man who has to take such dose as the waters of Luchon! But then, life is good living compared with the dose the Democrats swallowed when they nominated Greeley and Brown. Poor fellows! they could not help it, poor fellows! but, then, misfortune had already made them familiar with many humiliations."

Gov. Geary, of Pennsylvania, called at head-quarters yesterday. He expressed great confidence in the certainty of Republican success in Pennsylvania in October and November. Judge Settle, of North Carolina, will take part in the canvass in Maine. Hon. W. G. Chandler, Secretary of the National Committee, and Col. L. E. Dudley, of the Veterans' Committee, were both at their posts yesterday.

Among the visitors at head-quarters were Hon. James Speed, W. H. Johnson, Albany, N. Y.; Rev. Jno. D. Easyvult, New-Jersey; Hon. Harry C. Dibble, Louisiana, and W. H. Gleason, Chairman of the State Central Committee of Florida. The latter gentleman speaks very encouragingly of Republican prospects in his State.

Connolly's Whereabouts.

A morning paper, on Friday, asserted that Mr. Connolly, the fugitive Ex-Controller, was within fifty miles of the City, and that he has been seen recently by friends riding in his carriage in the neighborhood of Westchester County. The same journal alleged that the Sheriff's office was perfectly cognisant of Mr Connolly's locale, but that for reasons of the Sheriff's own the matter was kept a profound secret.

Both Mr. Brennan and Under-Sheriff Joel Stevens indignantly deny the charge of falsehood preferred so recklessly against them, and pledge their word that Mr. Connolly is without the State to the best of their knowledge and belief. The other report lately circulated by an evening paper to the effect that Mr. Judson G. Jarvis, the Order of Arrest Clerk, had in his possession a warrant for one of the members of the late Ring, which he had kept back for example to create a political sensation, is also contrary to the facts. The Ring remains to be arrested.

AMUSEMENTS.

"KING CARROT" AT THE GRAND OPERA-HOUSE.

The hour at which the representation of "King Carrot" at the Grand Opera-house terminated last night, let many property holders, thus detaining, prevents so careful a review of the play as its qualities call for. The imperfections of a first performance would, at any rate, have made a satisfying summary of the spectacular merits of the entertainment—its chief merits, it will be understood—almost impossible. A hurried review of the theme of the piece and of the points illustrated with most felicity is, for these reasons, all that can be attempted. A very numerous audience witnessed the representation, and its manifestations of approval—a very remarkable tendency where the intense heat of the auditorium and the length of the rehearsal are taken into account—afforded frequent opportunities for gratification. To the durable touches of "Kiss Carrot" we cannot, under the impression of yesterday's incidents, point with certainly. But it may be read from the extent of the enthusiasm that the evening great delight was manifested at the action of the piece, for its realism and at the great fashion of pageants of its stage scenery.

The story of "King Carrot" runs thus: Fredolin, Sovereign of Krokodyne, is so deeply involved in financial difficulties that he is determined to wed the Princess Gamgonde, whose hand he has not even seen, with a view to retrieving his fortunes. The necessity for the marriage is however, removed by the appearance of Roiqueu, a gentle, who tempts him to party with the spirit of his ancestors—much as Charles Surface is induced to do with his pictures in "The School for Scandal"—in consideration of the money the Sovereign requires. Fredolin, though released from need, means Gamgonde and becomes enamored of her. The Japanese are to occur without delay. Now it happens that Fredolin has mourned the beauty of Coloquinte, an aged sorceress, who, for some misdeed or other, has been in exile from fairy land until the period now dealt with. Thought an enemy of Coloquinte, from whom she wants to be freed Roses du Soir, a beautiful maiden whom the witch has stolen, and on the proceeds of whose labors she has subsisted since the day of her banishment, Robin, desirous of teaching Fridolin the art of governing well, conspires with the sorceress to deceive him. This is easily accomplished by the union of the two gents. Coloquinte, potent sorcerer, calls for her instrument King Carrot, a hoary old gnome of the vegetable kingdom, and, while causing all the woman at court to fall in love with her protégé, she transfers all his disagreeable traits to Fridolin, whom a revolution soon ensues. A subsequent act finds Fridolin wandering the world over. Happily, he is still under the protection of Roiqueu, who only lent himself—and partially at that—to Coloquinte's plans, with the intention of chastening the young ruler by misfortune. After consultation with an old sorcerer, who, after being turn piccemeal in full view of the audience, proves to be a young fellow of the first water, the fugitive learns that the single talisman by which fairy power is to be annihilated is the ring of King Salomon, last heard of in Pompeii previous to the eruption of Vesuvius. The astrologer's gift of a magic lamp transports the party to the doomed city, and restores it to the condition of prosperous and teeming activity in which it existed previous to the outbreak of the volcano. Fridolin secures the ring and returns homeward in best his night. He and his companions, cleverly disguised, appear at court. King Carrot is discovered in the enjoyment of all Fridolin's privileges, and in possession of the affection of Gamgonde. This perfidious creature is advised by Coloquinte that Fridolin has a table book, in the manner of which King Carrot has mounted without. When Fridolin returns home of his disguise, he finds that he never experienced, and, by strategy, he gains the ring. The jewel is at once turned against Fridolin, and he acknowledge Sovereign of Krokodyne is once more driven forth. Vice, there is scarcely any occasion to say, is not intended to triumph more frequently in fairy spectacles than in melo-drama. The royal wanderer seeks out the kingdom of insects and enters into an alliance against Coloquinte with the Queen of the Bees. The incidents following acquaint us with the fact that the sorceress has mysteriously disappeared and that King Carrot is, literally, rotting after the fashion of ordinary leguminous products. His subjects tire of him and a revolt is imminent. It occurs and King Carrot, terrified, surrenders without striking a blow. A few seconds before his overthrow, Coloquinte appears and warns him that he is still potent so, long as a tuft on his head, which no human hand can remove, is untouched. Unlucky, however, a monkey lights upon the tuft, and the rule of the vegetable ends. Fridolin retains the sceptre, and it may be foreseen that his Queen will be pretty Roses du Soir, who, ever since Robin, has released her from duress, has followed the wandering monarch in the habit of a page.

We render at all familiar with M. Sardou's dramatic compositions need be advised that his text but one "Rebecca" being his freshest—is by no means his best. Apart from the lack of ingenuity shown in the creation and development of the plot, the language of the original libretto—for there is much music in "King Carrot"—is of the commonest sort. Mr. Daly has made good use of the material at his disposal; and, if we except some allusions to politics, provoking demonstrations which playgoers do not attend the theatre to witness, his dialogue is not a whit more trashy than that of the original composer. It is justice to M. Sardou to say that M. Offenbach has

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

At the Exchange yesterday, Monday, Aug. 26, James M. Miller sold, by order of the Supreme Court, under the direction of Richard C. Beamish, Esq., referee, the three-story and basement brown-stone house and lot situate on the south side of Eighteenth-street, 275.10 feet west of Lexington-avenue, 16.4 by 102.2, to the plaintiff, Geo. W. McCallum, for $1,800, subject and above a mortgage of $6,000. Total, $10,500. No other business was transacted at the Exchange. There was, however, a very goodly number of persons in the room, among whom we noticed many of the old habitues of the place, who had returned from their Summer rustications and appear refreshed and invigorated, and ready to take part in the coming Autumn real estate campaign. The most of them expressed themselves as having confidence in the market, and they expect values to advance materially.

The following real estate and other property is advertised to be sold at public auction today, Aug. 27, at the Exchange:

By A. J. Bleecker, Son & Co., by order of the Supreme Court, under the direction of Philo T. TWENTY PER CENT. INVESTMENT.
THE AMERICAN
BRIDGE COMPANY,
OF CHICAGO, ILL.
L. B. BOOMER, of Chicago, President.
(ORGANIZED AUG. 1, 1870.)
AUTHORIZED CAPITAL STOCK, $1,000,000

The whole amount of the authorized Capital Stock of this Company not having been issued, the balance thereof will be issued to subscribers at par, payments for same to be made in four installments of 25 per cent. each, viz.:
25 PER CENT. JULY 15, 1872.
25 PER CENT. AUG. 1, 1872.
25 PER CENT. SEPT. 1, 1872.
25 PER CENT. OCT. 1, 1872.

The Subscription Books are open at the office of the undersigned and will be placed on sale in New-York, when fully subscribed. All past due installments must be paid with interest at time of subscription.

The total amount of stock issued at this time is $414,000, and on this basis the Company shows a present surplus of $130,330 97, and is now doing a flourishing business. One thousand men are constantly employed in their extensive works, and they now have on hand $2,930,000 of work for various railroads in the United States, among which may be mentioned the
CHICAGO, R. I. & PACIFIC,
CHICAGO & NORTH-WESTERN,
MICHIGAN CENTRAL,
MISSOURI PACIFIC,
ATLANTIC & PACIFIC, &c.,
and the Company is now offered work to the amount of over $6,000,000, including some of the largest bridges ever built in this country; to accept of which, and further business necessitates a larger working capital, the purchase of material has to be kept constantly on hand, and the Company are frequently obliged to receive, in part payment for their work, railroad and other bonds, which are perfectly good security, but not always readily marketable.

A point of incidental but great importance to those seeking security in the note that the Company owns utility works, which, with its other leading real estate assets, are will be worth, in six years, at least $1,000,000 all income equal to the whole proposed capital.

The success of the American Bridge Company, though brief, has already fully demonstrated the profitableness of the enterprise. The Company has constructed since its organization, and up to the first of September, 1871, a total of 38,137 feet of bridges, 18 turntables, 1,000 miles of track, 1,000 miles of screw pile substructures, costing $3,400,000, and have facilities for the construction of pneumatic piles, unsurpassed by any Company in the country, and a demand for the construction of at least 1,000 feet of bridges for every working day in the year.

The Iron Railroad and Highway Bridge at Leavenworth, of three spans of 340 feet each, and the Union Pacific Bridge across the Missouri River, of seven spans of 250 feet each, were constructed by this Company.

The net profit arising from this business, as shown by the books of the Company as to the first of July, 1872, was the sum of $373,482 14, or at the rate of $224,089 29 per annum, being over 54 per cent. upon the capital stock then outstanding. With the proposed new facilities, machinery, &c., the Company will have much greater capacity, and the proceeds of the increased issue of stock will enable them to buy material for cash, thereby making a saving of from $50,000 to $75,000 per year.

The Company can undoubtedly, on above basis, make dividends of from 20 to 25 per cent. per annum on the full amount of capital, $1,000,000.

The Company can undoubtedly, on above basis, make dividends of from 20 to 25 per cent. per annum on the full amount of capital, $1,000,000, with a fair prospect of considerable increase.

The undersigned are prepared to give to those inquiring, full information, and satisfactory evidence as to the reliability of the Company's statements, and too unquestioned integrity and ability of the officers.

EXTENSION RAILWAY
First Mortgage 7 Per Cent. Convertible
GOLD BONDS,
AT 90 AND INTEREST,

Issued by the Bloomington, Bloomington and Western Railway Co. in building its EXTENSION line West, in a direct line from Champaign (155 miles) to the Mississippi River at Keokuk, and a branch from White Heath (32 miles) to Decatur, all in the State of Illinois. The bonds are secured by a first and only mortgage on the EXTENSION, now being rapidly constructed in the most thorough manner by able and experienced contractors who represent a capital of several millions of dollars, which insures the line being built at an early date. About 60 miles are already finished and 120 miles graded; the whole line, 242 miles, will be completed early in 1873. We have been connected and entirely familiar with the I., B. & W. Railway from its early organization. It was completed in the Autumn of 1870, and has developed rapidly into a SUCCESSFUL AND WEALTHY CORPORATION, having a large revenue from its largely increasing business. With the EXTENSION it will be one corporation, with 420 miles of road, located in a commanding position in the heart of the best portion of the country. The counties on the line of the EXTENSION in 1870 had a population of 242,320; valuation of real and personal estate, $194,606,000; bushels of grain raised, 27,600,000; value of farm products, $95,570,000, and live stock, $18,349,000; to which may safely be added 15 per cent. to represent the present population and value. THE COUNTIES ON THE OLD LINE AND THE EXTENSION TOGETHER CONTAIN A POPULATION OF NEARLY THREE-QUARTERS OF A MILLION, AND A PROPERTY VALUATION EXCEEDING $400,000,000.

From these statistics it will be readily seen that the EXTENSION will have a Local Business that will make it a complete success. In addition to this it will have the entire Through Traffic of the Missouri, Iowa, and Nebraska Road, connecting with it on the Mississippi River, and extending West to the Missouri, 200 miles, where it connects with the Midland Pacific in Nebraska. These two corporations, and also the Peoria and Rock Island (91 miles), and the Davenport and St. Paul (300 miles), although separate corporations, ARE CONTROLLED IN THE INTEREST OF THE INDIANAPOLIS, BLOOMINGTON AND WESTERN RAILWAY, and practically, will be a united line of more than 1,200 miles, the through business of which will pass over the I., B. & W. This is an East and West trunk route and has no parallel competing line. The Eastern connections at Indianapolis are the Pennsylvania Central, Baltimore and Ohio, Bellefontaine, Lake Shore, and New-York Central, and other roads centering at this point. From the Red-board to the West and North-west the distances are materially reduced via this system of roads; so much so that it cannot fail to be the popular line for travel and business. Liberal subscriptions to the stock were made by towns and counties on the line of the EXTENSION, and the remainder has been taken by experienced railroad men and Eastern capitalists.

These facts cannot fail to make the bonds, which will be issued only on completed road, take high rank among the best railway securities.

The bonds are $1,000 each, convertible into stock at par, at the option of the holder, and may be registered free of charge.

Coupons, payable January and July 1, free of tax. The bonds may now be had from banks and bankers throughout the country.

We offer them at present at 90 and interest, and recommend them strongly to our friends and investors as one of the safest and most desirable securities on the market.

Bonds delivered free of express charges. Maps, pamphlets and circulars furnished on application.

THE
CHICAGO AND CANADA SOUTHERN
First Mortgage Sinking Fund 30 Years
SEVEN PER CENT. GOLD BONDS
Interest Payable April and October at the Union Trust Company,
AT 90 AND ACCRUED INTEREST.

This road is the Western link in the new AIR LINE from BUFFALO to CHICAGO and runs from the Detroit River to Chicago in nearly a straight line.

The road is a part of the same line as the Canada Southern and is being built by the same men, viz.: Alfred Cornwall, John F. Tracy, David Dows, Wm. L. Scott, Henry Farnam, R. A. Forsyth, Jas. M. Burke, M. L. Sykes, Jr., all Directors either in the Chicago and North-western or the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific; George Opdyke, of the Midland road; Sidney Dillon, Daniel Drew, John Ross, David Stewart, Samuel J. Tilden, Kenyon Cox, and other prominent railroad men.

The Road, like the Canada Southern, will have steel rails (60 pounds to the yard) throughout; is practically straight and level; much shorter, and can be run with greater speed and safety than any other road connecting with Buffalo and Chicago.

Twenty-five miles are finished and running; seventy-five miles more are so far advanced as to be finished by Jan. 1, and the entire road will be completed during the ensuing year. Steel rails and ties for one-half the entire road have already been purchased.

The builders of the road control enough of its Chicago feeders to obtain for it a profitable business from the start, having projected the line to accommodate existing business and having seen the necessity for another trunk line between Chicago and the Atlantic seaboard, located exclusively with the view of obtaining the cheapest transportation practicable.

The branch lines will make the shortest connections between Chicago and Toledo, and Chicago and Detroit, as well as between all these points and Buffalo.

The Canada Southern Bonds, in every particular like these, were eagerly taken, the last of them several weeks ago, by the best class of investors, and were on the market a shorter time than any other railroad loan of like amount for years past.

The proceeds of these bonds will complete the entire line, and we recommend them with the same confidence as we did the Canada Southern, and regard them as in every way a choice security.

COLORED MASS-MEETING

Grand Demonstration of Twentieth Ward Association.

Three Thousand Men Pledge for Grant—Spirited Addresses by H. R. Garnett, W. F. Butler, George Francis, Samuel Clay and Others.

These Democrats who have been boasting that the colored men of the City are going over to that party, who are their political enemies now as much as during the rebellion, should have witnessed the wonderful enthusiasm and the unanimous loyalty to Grant and Wilson and the Republican Party which was displayed at the mass-meeting at Republican Hall last evening. The meeting was called by the Twentieth Ward Colored Republican Association, for the purpose of adding their voices to the Republican Party and its candidates. The spacious hall at the corner of Broadway and Twenty-third-street, used as the headquarters of the General Committee, was not large enough. It was packed in the doorways, windows, and stairways, aisles, and many were unable to obtain entrance. At least 3,000 persons were in the hall, 1,000 were outside and in the ante-rooms, and the demonstration was an unqualified success as regards numbers, unanimity of expression, and unbounded enthusiasm.

As early as 7 o'clock in the evening the hall was nearly filled by an intelligent audience, among whom many ladies and white people were noticed. At about 8 o'clock the Fourteenth Ward Colored Grant and Wilson Campaign Club, numbering 48 members, arrived in a body, headed by a band of music. Soon after the Eighth Ward Unity Club, numbering 300 members, marched into the already crowded hall, and managed in some mysterious manner to find standing room somewhere. Their banner bore the following motto: "We are as true as steel. We remember our enemies and do not forget our friends." "We propose to fight it out on this line if it takes all Summer." "Let us have peace." Among other colored clubs present were the Fifteenth Assembly District Campaign Club, 65 members; the Eighth Ward George W. Francis Club, 50 members; Twentieth Ward Grant and Wilson Club, 350 members.

At 8:30 Mr. David R. Johnson, of the Eighth Ward Unity Club, called the meeting to order, and the following officers were nominated and enthusiastically elected:

President—James G. Frisbie.

Vice-Presidents—David R. Johnson, Elias R. Conover, John J. Freeman, T. S. W. Titus, Capt. Andrew Brown, Geo. W. Myers, Geo. W. Fraser, Wm. Freeman.

Secretaries—Wm. Clay, Samuel Martin, Edward Wa. Widgeon, Alexander Powell, Andrew Johnson.

Among those on the platform were also the Rev. Henry Highland Garnet, Hon. Frederick Douglass, Hon. John H. Wales, William H. Robinson, of Albany, Chairman of the Colored State Central Committee; George W. Francis, Samuel Clay, of the General Committee, and the Presidents of various colored campaign clubs.

Rev. Henry Highland Garnet, who was received with enthusiastic cheers, congratulated the Chairman and assembly on the large meeting of the colored citizens of New-York, which he had been called on to address. They had now entered upon the most exciting political campaign in the history of the United States. For the first time in that history men could go to the polls and cast their votes for President and Vice-President of the United States, without distinction of race or color. Two parties claimed their suffrages—the Democratic and the Republican. The Democratic party was well known in the history of the world and in the history of this country for making high and bold pretensions to liberty and equality; but it was also well known as being the party for doing nothing. It had always been the bulwark of slavery and injustice. Even the first great apostle of American Democracy lived and died a slaveholder. If slavery wanted a defender when it was yet in its infancy, and when a strong arm might have crushed the hideous monster, who was the defender? It was the Democracy. Democracy had driven the country to ruin and despotism, and eventually hurled the country into a civil war, looking on quietly while brother took a brother's blood. [Groans.] It was only when Abraham Lincoln [cheers] was called to the Presidential chair that the foul spirits conjured up by the Democratic Party were banished. James Buchanan [hisses] was the president of the Democracy at the breaking out of the war, and he was the last Democratic President of the United States. [Cheers.] Going in with Thos. Jefferson and coming out with James Buchanan was like going in at the big end of the cow's horn and coming out at the small end. [Laughter.] One of the minions of the Democracy—a Supreme Court Judge—had decided that it was Republican, Democratic and constitutional to buy and whip slaves, and it was the same Judge, Roger B. Taney, who said the black man had no rights the white man was bound to respect. [Hisses.] A particular friend or his remonstrated with the Judge on such an unjust decision, when the Judge replied, "I could not help it. I did not want to do it, but my party compelled me, and I had to do it." This was the party that now asked the black man, through such men as Greeley and Brown—[hisses]—to vote for them. They were told to throw out their nets and catch a man and fish at the same time, and they the black once. Now he was very happy to say that they had thrown out their bait, but never a bite could they get from a black fish. [Laughter.] Sumner was next sent to coax the black man, but he found he could do no more than Greeley, and he might tell them that if Sumner could not coax colored people, Greeley would not believe one come back from the dead. Then came James R. Doolittle, the man who had said that the first duty of the Democratic Party was to overthrow "nigger supremacy." Now, what was "nigger supremacy" in this country? They had four hundred negroes in offices, one hundred thousand in every million in the country, and these grand offices consisted of rolling bales in the Custom-houses and running with bales of papers in the Post-offices. They had a colored Minister at Liberia and another at Hayti—but they were sent there because a white man could not live there. And this was the "supremacy" Mr. Doolittle said should be put down. Was not that a magnanimous party, and ought not Horace Greeley, with such a crowd around him, to be placed in the Presidential chair? [Hisses.] And yet they call upon you—you who bear on your bodies the scars and wounds received from rebel bayonets and rifles, to reinstate the party who caused these wounds. Will you do it? [Cries of "Never, never."] He had been himself mobbed and beaten and driven over since he was sixteen years old, but now that he enjoyed the blessings of liberty he was anxious to see how his brethren, who had not had as hard a lot as he had, would vote. [Cries of "Grant and Wilson."] If a black man could be found mad enough to vote for Horace Greeley, let him go to his grave "unwept, unhonored and unsung." The man ought to be a slave who would vote for chains and manacles. But what had the Republican Party done? They had saved the country in the hands of rebels, and the President is filling rail in the hands of traitors. They restored peace, they took the black man and set him free, [enthusiastic cheering,] and then placed in his hand a ballot, so that he might choose his rulers. They amnestied a hundred and fifty thousand rebels and restored to them all the political disabilities which they knew many of those votes would be turned against their own party. He knew he spoke truthfully of his colored fellow-citizens when he said they could not forget the party which had done so much for them. They would vote for that Banner inscribed with the names of Grant and Wilson, [enthusiastic cheering,] again and again repeated, and for another, bearing the name of John A. Dix, who would be next Governor of New-York State. [Cheers.] Is would be with Greeley as it was with a horse at the Derby races. An Irishman bet on a horse named Botherum, and he lost his money thereby. Now Botherum came in away behind all the others, but the Irishman threw up his hat and shouted, "Hooray! Look how he drives them all before him!" [Laughter.] So it would be with Greeley when he came in away behind the other candidates—his supporters would say, "Look how he drives them all before him!" In conclusion, he urged them to be steadfast and unwavering in their allegiance to their best friends, the Republican Party.

At the conclusion of the reverend gentleman's speech three cheers were called for and given with a will.

The following resolutions were read and carried in the affirmative by a deafening "aye!"

Whereas, We, the colored voters of the Twentieth Ward, deem it a duty to our brethren of this our common country, to so express our sentiments that they may know our position in this most momentous campaign in the history of the country, therefore, resolved that in view of the relations we hold as American citizens whose liberties are not so fully assured as to allow us in any way to relax our efforts for the success of the Republican Party, that we do heartily endorse the nomination of U. S. Grant for President, and Henry Wilson for Vice-President.

Resolved, That in the election recently held in North Carolina we find great cause for congratulation in that they have elected Caldwell as Governor by 2,000 or 3,000 majority, notwithstanding the almost superhuman efforts of the so-called Liberal Republicans, aided by our most inveterate enemies, the Democratic Party.

Resolved, That we do ratify the nomination made at Philadelphia, and earnestly implore our brethren North and south to give it their undivided support, as upon the success of said ticket depends our salvation politically.

Resolved, That we deplore the action of some of our race in espousing the cause of our enemies and seeking to draw aside others from the broad road of equal and exact justice to all men, to a path leading to the ditch of political ostracism, and that we tender our sympathy to our brethren who have been misled, and we pledge ourselves to use our best efforts to enlighten our people as to the dangerous character of the movement, and we recommend to our people the perusal of the speeches of Hon. Henry Wilson, the greatest of living statesmen, and the indefatigable, has succeeded in securing to the birth of the Republican Party, and those speeches which were so [illegible] in the Senate on the Civil Rights bill.

Resolved, That we recognize the services of our tried and steadfast friend, Hon. Henry Wilson the greatest living statesman, and a true friend of our rights; and we pledge our hearty and undivided support for him in the great work in which they are united in a legal contest, and all our efforts to unite the colored people of this country under the banner of the Republican Party,
